STATES RALLY TO ARKANSAS' MAN IN VOTE

First Ballot Is Practically Unanimous For Minority Floor Leader.

(BULLETIN

CONVENTION HALL, HOUSTON, June 29.—Senator Joseph T. Robinson will be Al Smith's running mate.

The convention at 1:41 p. m. today (Ohio time), on the first ballot was practically unanimous in its choice of the Arkansas leader for vice-president. Other candidates did not have a look-in.

CONVENTION HALL, HOUSTON, Tex., June 29.—The work of choosing Alfred E. Smith's Democratic running mate began in the Coliseum at 10:45 today.

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, minority leader of the U. S. senate, was assured of nomination—and there was a suggestion that his choice might be by acclamation after some nominating speeches for several candidates.

In an event, Senator Pat Harrison presiding, expressed the view that the convention would never reach a ballot, while other leaders said it would be Robinson on the first ballot if balloting were necessary.

Judge Solley, of Alabama, speaking in the rich tones of the south, made the first nominating speech, placing before the convention the name of General Henry T. Allen, a Kentuckian. The convention paid scant attention and was more absorbed with conversation and watching some burros which had been driven down the side aisle.

Former Lieut. Governor H. H. Castle, of Mississippi, got astride one of the burros for a time and saluted his friends of the Mississippi delegation.

STATE HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT TAKEN BY DEATH

Hugh H. Turner, 58, Well Known Here, Dies While Sitting on Porch.

Hugh H. Turner, 58, died suddenly at his home, 642 E. Chestnut-st. Lancaster, Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. Turner was sitting on the porch, talking to his wife, when he was seized with the fatal attack and died almost instantly.

The deceased suffered a similar attack about five weeks ago, and apparently had recovered.

For 13 years Mr. Turner has been state highway superintendent.

Besides his wife, he is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Lloyd Tobias, Mrs. Trafford Shoemaker and Mrs. Harold Freed, of Basil; one sister, Mrs. Charles Belt, of Lancaster, and three grandchildren.

The funeral services will be held Saturday at 2 p. m., from the Maple-st church. Rev. L. C. Cooper will officiate. Interment in Forest Rose cemetery.

Mr. Turner was known to a number of people in this city.

THE WATER RATE QUESTION

(An Editorial)

The increase in cost of water, to the consumer and especially in Circleville, has been decidedly out of line with the index of the cost of living, computed from the U. S. Department of Labor Statistics.

This increase in rate seems rather inconsistent with the decreasing cost nature of the business. That furnishing water is a decreasing cost industry, (i. e., the more units supplied, the less it costs per unit) is admitted by the companies in their rate schedules, which show much lower rates where large quantities of water are used.

But not only is water a decreasing cost industry as regards one costumer, but it is also a decreasing cost industry as regards the public as a whole, in that after the plant has been set up and the pipes laid, it means very little additional expense to connect one more consumer.

In the case of a new subdivision in an enterprising town, usually pipes are laid just once for the entire subdivision and as new homes are built it costs very little to connect them with the water supply. Yet the income these additional customers bring in helps defray the expenses of the central water pumping station.

Hence, it would seem that, since a large proportion of the investment of water companies is fixed, and a small portion variable, as the number of customers increases the investment per customer should decrease.

However, the facts show a different trend.

Circleville is paying one of the highest rates to the Ohio Water Service company, if not the highest, of any city in the state. Just why, no one seems to know.

Here is the schedule:

Minimum, 2000 gallons per quarter, $7.60 per year.

2,500 gallons per day, .42 per M. gallon.

3,500 gallons per day, .20 per M. gallon.

The minimum, 2,000 gallons per quarter, is the one that nearly everyone uses. Dividing the yearly cost of $7.60 into quarters, as payment is paid, and it is easy to see beyond a ray of dispute that the AVERAGE HOME WATER USER OF CIRCLEVILLE IS PAYING THE UNHEARD OF RATE OF .95 PER THOUSAND GALLONS OF WATER, and has been paying it for years.

The Circleville Herald believes that any public company serving the people is entitled to a just profit just the same as private companies are entitled to theirs, but when it finds, as in this instance, the water rate is double and triple that of other companies performing a like service to other Ohio municipalities, it is inclined to believe something is wrong.

At least, the water-using public of Circleville—and that includes about everyone, is entitled to know why it must pay such a huge rate while Washington C. H., Chillicothe, and other cities have but one-third of a similar expense.

GEORGE CRAMER ENDS HIS LIFE

CLEVELAND, June 29.—Geo. J. Cramer, 47, former head of the defunct George I. Cramer, Inc., and prominent in real estate circles, was found dead, apparently from monoxide poisoning, in a closed garage in the rear of his home here today.

Aged Missouri Senator Acts Like a Real Sport In His Defeat.

HOUSTON, June 29 — If they thought Jim Reed would sing a swan song, they were wrong. He roared a battle cry.

The stern old senator from Missouri, aging, his political life near an end, his ambition pathetically crushed in the highest aim of his turbulent career, came to the platform of convention hall last night after the Democratics had given him 52 votes to the 849 which flowed to Al Smith.

The Democrats the least they could do was to extend Jim Reed some sort of gracious gesture had given him 30 minutes to say whatever one might say when he found himself whipped as badly as Reed. But Democratic conventions do not impose time limits on Jim Reed. He took 45 minutes. He spent them in demonstrating that he was a good sport, could take a beating with a smile, disliked Herb Hoover with his same old fervor, and could lash out in invective against the Republicans with all his old-time steam.

TO LEAD DEMOCRATS

GOVERNOR ALFRED E. SMITH

Former City Newsboy Elevated To Role Of Democratic Chieftain

"My Heart Is Where My Palate Ought To Be," Is All Al Says.

By PERCY B. SCOTT
(United Press Staff Correspondent

ALBANY, N. Y., June 29.—A former New York city newsboy, raised on Oliver street of the metropolis' famous East Side, today sat in the state mansion preparing to start a campaign which, if successful, will elevate him to the presidency of the United States.

Governor Alfred E. Smith, the "Al" who four times in the past ten years has been elected governor of New York, last night received his greatest honor when the Democratic party on the first ballot nominated him as its presidential candidate.

The governor is accustomed to political victories. His success in New York politics has given him that assurance. But last night he seemed reticent and even shy as he heard, over the radio, the returns that brought him the nomination. When the nomination was decided he seemed unable to speak. Mrs. John A. Warner, his daughter, threw her arms about him and only then did the governor turn to newspapermen to say:

"My heart is where my palate ought to be."

Sat With Friends

The governor had gathered a few friends in the ball room of the state mansion to hear the returns. In addition to his daughter and her husband, there was Col. and Mrs. Frederick Stewart Greene, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Mascowitz, Mr. and Mrs. Parker Corning, Dr. Matthias Nicoll, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Edward Griffin, Mrs. J. Foster Warner and Adjutant General Franklin W. Ward in addition to a number of newspapermen. Outside a number of women gathered early and the strains of "The Sidewalks of New York" could be heard as the women started singing.

When it was announced the roll call was to start, Smith called his

OHIO SWINGS 45 DELEGATES TO GOVERNOR

And Stampede of Delegates To Get On Band Wagon Starts—Smith Wins With 849 2-3 Votes, Buckeye State Turning Tide For Him.

BY CARL D. GROAT
United Press Staff Correspondent.

CONVENTION HALL, HOUSTON, June 29.—Governor Alfred E. Smith is the Democratic party's candidate for president.

Smith, reared among the humble surroundings of New York's East Side, stood today as democracy's standard-bearer, chosen amid wild acclaim and some strife in the Democratic national convention just before midnight last night.

Today, a party united after a week of bickering turned to naming Smith's running-mate. Senator Joseph Robinson, a sturdy Democrat of the southwest, stood out as likely running-mate, although other contenders were to be presented at today's session.

Smith won the nomination with 849 2-3 votes. Ohio, switching from its favorite son, Atlee Pomerene, turned the tide for him. The balloting, interrupted by disagreements in the Mississippi and Oklahoma delegations, showed a total of 724 2-3 before the delegation clamored to change their votes. The climb to the bandwagon started: Ohio gave 45 of its 48 votes to Smith; Mississippi amid much argument, gave him another 9 1-2; Indiana chimed in with 25 more; Nebraska gave 12 more and Kansas 11 1-2.

Mrs. John J. Galligan of Salt Lake City, went to the platform to announce the official count. The tumult of applause drowned out her words, but her announcement showed Smith victorious with 849 2-3 votes—more than 116 above the two-thirds majority he needed.

Earlier in the night, the much-heralded prohibition row was aired briefly as a mere formality, and then the party platform with a strong 18th amendment enforcement plank was adopted.

Smith had gone over as his managers predicted confidently all the week, he had even more votes than maany expected.

Starts Demonstration

The announcement of his victory started a demonstration that made the rafters of Sam Houston coliseum tremble. It was marred by another of the fights which have exploded among the southern delegates, the past three sessions. Police rushed in as an attempt was made to seize the Texas standard and force it into the swirling parade. Soon police and a few delegates were milling in the side aisle and it looked for a time as though the disorder might spread. But Assistant Chief Kuykendall's men soon had the trouble quieted and the parade went on. There had been one other row in the Mississippi delegation previously as members quarreled over the chairman's announcement that the delegation stood 20 for Smith on a change of vote from its favorite son, Pat Harrison. Police calmed a couple of especially vociferous members.

Mrs. Alfred E. Smith, wife of the governor, was the happiest member of that whole house—a convention gone happily riotous over reaching the climax of its labors. Her son embraced and kissed her, and other members of the party swarmed about as the woman who has been helpmeet to the empire state's East Side governor beamed radiantly at the overwhelming reception Smith's nomination received.

Reed Is Good Sport

Then there followed a scene with elements of both heroism and tragedy. Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, the beaten fighter, came down from his hotel, and with the instinct of good American sportsmanship told the convention the battle was over and that it was up to everybody in the party to make a common front against a common foe.

"Reed let it be known as he had done upon his arrival here last Saturday, that he would be found fighting in the trenches.

Straight as an arrow, handsome with his white hair, and sol-

DRY OFFICERS END BIG TIME IN NEW YORK

First Unofficial Celebration For Al Smith Holds Sway In Night Clubs.

NEW YORK, June 29.—New York's first unofficial celebration of Governor Alfred E. Smith's nomination for president ended abruptly early today when an army of federal prohibition officers swept through 16 exclusive night clubs, seized liquor and arrested 96 persons.

Expensively-gowned women and men in evening clothes were taken to police stations in the dawn's early light and held in bail for a hearing in federal court later today. All were charged with violation of the Volstead act.

Somehow the tip got along Broadway that a raid was about to be staged, aand many celebrities stayed away from their usual haunts. The dry agents descended on Texas Guinan's club, fully expecting to arrest the queen of the bright light belt.

But for the first time in months Texas had gone to bed early. Helen Morgan, who is the chief attraction at Chez Helen Morgan, also escaped.

Major Maurice Campbell, head of the dry forces here, imported 125 men whose faces were unfamiliar along Broadway. They had no trouble gaining entrance to the clubs where they were greeted by "hurray for Al Smith" and the strains of "The Sidewalks of New York."

FRAULEIN STARTS FLIGHT ON JULY 2

MONTREAL, June 29 — Fraulein Thea Rasche, German aviatrix, will start in the Bellanca monoplane "North Star" from St. Hubert airdrome here July 2, on her proposed trans-Atlantic flight to Germany she announced before leaving for New York.

The German girl apparently was undaunted by the failure to take-off Thursday morning, which she ascribed largely to "soft" ground at the Cap Dela Madeleine airport.

THE WATER RATE QUESTION

(An Editorial)

The increase in cost of water, to the consumer and especially in Circleville, has been decidedly out of line with the index of the cost of living, computed from the U. S. Department of Labor Statistics.

This increase in rate seems rather inconsistent with the decreasing cost nature of the business. That furnishing water is a decreasing cost industry, (i. e., the more units supplied, the less it costs per unit) is admitted by the companies in their rate schedules, which show much lower rates where large quantities of water are used.

But not only is water a decreasing cost industry as regards one costumer, but it is also a decreasing cost industry as regards the public as a whole, in that after the plant has been set up and the pipes laid, it means very little additional expense to connect one more consumer.

In the case of a new subdivision in an enterprising town, usually pipes are laid just once for the entire subdivision and as new homes are built it costs very little to connect them with the water supply. Yet the income these additional customers bring in helps defray the expenses of the central water pumping station.

Hence, it would seem that, since a large proportion of the investment of water companies is fixed, and a small portion variable, as the number of customers increases the investment per customer should decrease.

However, the facts show a different trend.

Circleville is paying one of the highest rates to the Ohio Water Service company, if not the highest, of any city in the state. Just why, no one seems to know.

Here is the schedule:

Minimum, 2000 gallons per quarter, $7.60 per year.

2,500 gallons per day, .42 per M. gallon.

3,500 gallons per day, .20 per M. gallon.

The minimum, 2,000 gallons per quarter, is the one that nearly everyone uses. Dividing the yearly cost of $7.60 into quarters, as payment is paid, and it is easy to see beyond a ray of dispute that the AVERAGE HOME WATER USER OF CIRCLEVILLE IS PAYING THE UNHEARD OF RATE OF .95 PER THOUSAND GALLONS OF WATER, and has been paying it for years.

The Circleville Herald believes that any public company serving the people is entitled to a just profit just the same as private companies are entitled to theirs, but when it finds, as in this instance, the water rate is double and triple that of other companies performing a like service to other Ohio municipalities, it is inclined to believe something is wrong.

At least, the water-using public of Circleville—and that includes about everyone, is entitled to know why it must pay such a huge rate while Washington C. H., Chillicothe, and other cities have but one-third of a similar expense.

OHIO SWINGS 45 DELEGATES TO GOVERNOR

And Stampede of Delegates To Get On Band Wagon Starts—Smith Wins With 849 2-3 Votes, Buckeye State Turning Tide For Him.

BY CARL D. GROAT
United Press Staff Correspondent.

CONVENTION HALL, HOUSTON, June 29.—Governor Alfred E. Smith is the Democratic party's candidate for president.

Smith, reared among the humble surroundings of New York's East Side, stood today as democracy's standard-bearer, chosen amid wild acclaim and some strife in the Democratic national convention just before midnight last night.

Today, a party united after a week of bickering turned to naming Smith's running-mate. Senator Joseph Robinson, a sturdy Democrat of the southwest, stood out as likely running-mate, although other contenders were to be presented at today's session.

Smith won the nomination with 849 2-3 votes. Ohio, switching from its favorite son, Atlee Pomerene, turned the tide for him. The balloting, interrupted by disagreements in the Mississippi and Oklahoma delegations, showed a total of 724 2-3 before the delegation clamored to change their votes. The climb to the bandwagon started. Ohio gave 45 of its 48 votes to Smith; Mississippi amid much argument, gave him another 9 1-2; Indiana chimed in with 25 more; Nebraska gave 12 more and Kansas 11 1-2.

Mrs. John J. Galligan of Salt Lake City, went to the platform to announce the official count. The tumult of applause drowned out her words, but her announcement showed Smith victorious with 849 2-3 votes—more than 116 above the two-thirds majority he needed.

Earlier in the night, the much-heralded prohibition row was aired briefly as a mere formality, and then the party platform with a strong 18th amendment enforcement plank was adopted.

Smith had gone over as his managers predicted confidently all the week, he had even more votes than maany expected.

Starts Demonstration

The announcement of his victory started a demonstration that made the rafters of Sam Houston coliseum tremble. It was marred by another of the fights which have exploded among the southern delegates, the past three sessions. Police rushed in as an attempt was made to seize the Texas standard and force it into the swirling parade. Soon police and a few delegates were milling in the side aisle and it looked for a time as though the disorder might spread. But Assistant Chief Kuykendall's men soon had the trouble quieted and the parade went on. There had been one other row in the Mississippi delegation previously as members quarreled over the chairman's announcement that the delegation stood 20 for Smith on a change of vote from its favorite son, Pat Harrison. Police calmed a couple of especially vociferous members.

Mrs. Alfred E. Smith, wife of the governor, was the happiest member of that whole house—a convention gone happily riotous over reaching the climax of its labors. Her son embraced and kissed her, and other members of the party swarmed about as the woman who has been helpmeet to the empire state's East Side governor beamed radiantly at the overwhelming reception Smith's nomination received.

Reed Is Good Sport

Then there followed a scene with elements of both heroism and tragedy. Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, the beaten fighter ,came down from his hotel, and with the instinct of good American sportsmanship told the convention the battle was over and that it was up to everybody in the party to make a common front against a common foe.

Reed let it be known, as he had done upon his arrival here last Saturday, that he would be found fighting in the trenches.

Straight as an arrow, handsome with his white hair and sol-

DRY OFFICERS END BIG TIME IN NEW YORK

First Unofficial Celebration For Al Smith Holds Sway In Night Clubs.

NEW YORK, June 29.—New York's first unofficial celebration of Governor Alfred E. Smith's nomination for president ended abruptly early today when an army of federal prohibition officers swept through 16 exclusive night clubs, seized liquor and arrested 96 persons.

Expensively-gowned women and men in evening clothes were taken to police stations in the dawn's early light and held in bail for a hearing in federal court later today. All were charged with violation of the Volstead act.

Somehow the tip got along Broadway that a raid was about to be staged, aand many celebrities stayed away from their usual haunts. The dry agents descended on Texas Guinan's club, fully expecting to arrest the queen of the bright light belt.

But for the first time in months Texas had gone to bed early. Helen Morgan, who is the chief attraction at Chez Helen Morgan, also escaped.

Major Maurice Campbell, head of the dry forces here, imported 125 men whose faces were unfamiliar along Broadway. They had no trouble gaining entrance to the clubs where they were greeted by "hurray for Al Smith" and the strains of "The Sidewalks of New York."

FRAULEIN STARTS FLIGHT ON JULY 2

MONTREAL, June 29 — Fraulein Thea Rasche, German aviatrix, will start in the Bellanca monoplane "North Star" from St. Hubert airdrome here July 2, on her proposed trans-Atlantic flight to Germany, she announced before leaving for New York.

The German girl apparently was undaunted by the failure to take-off Thursday morning, which she ascribed largely to "soft" ground at the Cap Dela Madeleine airport.

OHIOAN CLAIMED BY INTENSE HEAT

STEUBENVILLE, O., June 29.—Heat claimed its second victim of the year, when Charles Runyon, 44, superintendent of the machine department, died while at work at the La Belle plant of the Wheeling Steel Corp.

He is survived by his widow and five children.

The first victim died two weeks ago.

Veteran Druggist Starts Westward As S. S. Delegate

George F. Grand-Girard, the druggist, started Friday on his way to Los Angeles, Calif., where he will attend as a state delegate, the Tenth World's Sunday School convention.

Mr. Grand-Girard will be a member of the "Ohio Special Tour Party" that will leave Chicago Saturday night, June 30. The train is made up of five Pullmans, an observation car and a diner.

Stops will be made at Omaha, Denver and Colorado Springs, where they will visit "The Garden of the Gods," Pike's Peak, then on to Ogden, The Yellowstone, Salt Lake City, Grand Canyon, and thence to their objective point, Los Angeles.

Of the 55 speakers scheduled to appear at the convention, 39 are from countries other than the United States, and will include Rio de Janeiro, Tokyo, Shanghai, Korea, South Africa, Australia, Egypt, Syria, Turkey, Greece, The Sudan, Mexico, Cuba and Manila.

Returning home the party will go to San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, Vancouver, Lake Louise, Banff and Minneapolis and arrive at Chicago July 31.

PROCESSING ROUGHAGES FOR CATTLE FEEDING

During the last few years considerable interest has developed in the processing of roughages for feeding to cattle. Some rather startling claims have been made for chopping, grinding, and "predigesting" roughages for both beef and dairy cattle.

In order to determine the merits of the different methods of feeding the roughages, tests are now being conducted by the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station. In these tests chopped roughage is compared with whole roughage, "predigested" chopped roughage with chopped roughage and also with silage. Three other lots of cattle are on a test comparing shelled corn, ground shelled corn and ground ear corn.

A MIGHT-HAVE-BEEN

Whistler Heard Above Noise and Convention Din

HOUSTON, June 29. — The shrieking voice of a police traffic whistle, wailing over all the noise and confusion of every demonstration on the convention floor whatever the cause, finally aroused Chairman Robinson to send an army of sergeants-at-arms and police to squelch the whistler.

They found William C. Page of the New York delegation, blue in the face with his persistent blowing. But his explanation that he had arranged with the wife back home in Wheatland, to send her whistle greetings via the convention radio dissipated the gathering wrath and he whistled cherrily on to the end.

TWO ESCAPE WHEN PLANE DESCENDS

WILMINGTON, O., June 29.—Lieut. Matthew G. Carpenter, 113th Observation Squadron, Indiana National Guard, and Sergt. L. M. Johnson, United States army, escaped injury near here last night, when a Curtiss O-11 biplane was forced to descend in a two-acre field adjoining a cemetery.

The two were on their way from Columbus to Dayton and became lost in a storm. Rain "shorted" the motor and forced the land. The machine was only slightly damaged.

great Dane dog, "Jefferson," and said:

"Come on, Jeff, let's listen."

The governor seated himself comfortably on a divan within a few feet of the radio instrument. The first vote was Alabama and on that Smith received one vote.

"That's one more than I got four years ago," Smith remarked.

The list proceeded to California which gave Smith its entire 26 votes to the New York governor.

Compares Last Time

"That's some different from four years ago," he said with a chuckle, recalling the Madison Square Garden convention in which Smith and William G. McAdoo fought day after day and finally eliminated one another.

New York was called. The entire group in the ball room laughed. Smith eyed them and with a straight face remarked:

"Now here's a hard one that will surprise everyone."

Soon the announcer's voice boomed that New York had cast 90 votes for the governor.

When the roll call was completed, showing Smith had a fraction less than nine votes of nomination, he stood up and smiled.

Then it was announced Ohio had switched its votes to give the governor the nomination.

New York's governor, perhaps recalling the far cry back to his early days on Oliver street, was quiet. His face was a study. His friends were quiet. Then Mrs. Warner rushed over and congratulated her father in a daughterly manner—a generous hug.

It was then Smith accepted his friends' congratulations, and turned to nepspapermen with the statement:

"Fills Me With Joy."

"My nomination on the first ballot fills me with joy and satisfaction that I know is shared by my family and friends. My heart is where my palate ought to be."

Outside, the crowd had grown to 1,000. They were shouting exuberantly, calling for "Al," and singing the "Sidewalks of New York." Motor cars rolled up and down the street, their friends shrieking.

Smith and Mrs. Warner went outside. The governor made his first post-nomination speech.

"The returns on the radio from Texas indicate that New York state, myself, my family, and all my friends are greatly honored by the confidence expressed in me by the delegates at the convention. Here in Albany, surrounded by my friends and neighbors, I can only say what I told the newspapermen that my heart is where my palate ought to be," he said.

Then he went into the mansion and placed a long distance call for his wife who attended the Houston convention.

By 2:25 a. m., Smith had received no official word of his nomination and decided to postpone his telegram of acceptance of the great honor until this announcement was received. He had received, however, a long congratulatory telegram from John W. Davis, the Democratic nominee in 1924.

AMUNDSEN HUNT IS THOUGHT TO HAVE BEEN LOST

No Trace of Noted Explorer and His Crew Found In Hunt After Hunt.

TROMSOE, NORWAY, June 29—The hunt for Roald Aumundsen, Arctic explorer who with five men started out to search for the crew of the dirigible Itelia, appears to have failed.

The big Italian airplane, Narina, made a reconnoitering tour over the coast of Bear Island and reported by wireless that no trace of Amundsen, Rene Guilbaud or others of that expedition had been seen.

Operators from the Bear Island radio station made a land exploration for Amundsen. This had been ordered after numerous reports were received that Amundsen and his plane had been seen off Bear Island.

The operators were unable to find the Arctic explorer.

But the search will continue with additional planes.

Captain H. Riiser Larsen and Lieutenant Luetzow Holn, who have been working by airplane off the steamer Braganza, announced they would fly back to Kings Bay immediately. From there they will make reconnoitering flights in search of Amundsen.

Meanwhile plans were going ahead to rescue six men encamped on the ice off Foyn Island. Among these six men is Lieutenant Lundborg, the heroic Swedish aviator who flew to the island, landed and then removed General Umberto Nobile. On his second flight to the island Lundborg's plane was damaged in landing and he was standed with five members of the Italia's crew.

ROME, June 29 — The ice on which five members of the crew of the dirigible Italia and Lieutenant Einer-Paal Lundborg are held prisoners, is drifting rapidly radio advices from the steamer Citta Di Milano indicated today.

THREE MEN PAY MURDER PENALTY IN STATE PRISON

White Man Dies For Killing Sweetheart; Two Others Are Negroes.

M'ALESTER, OKLA., June 29—Three men, two of them negroes paid the death penalty for murder here today in Oklahoma's first triple execution.

Walter Wigger, white, who was convicted of killing his young sweetheart, Mrs. Ruth Harris of Miami, Okla., was the first to go to the electric chair.

He was followed by Theodore Brustler, negro, convicted of slaying William Heeman, Muskogee, Okla., storekeeper. While O'Neil, slayer of Mark Hipscher, Oklahoma City street car motorman, was the third man electrocuted.

"I have nothing agin' you, my boy," were Wigger's last words to the executioner before a 2,300 volt current was sent through his body.

"I wish everybody good luck," was O'Neil's parting statement.

Bruster had nothing to say.

GRAIN REVIEW

CHICAGO, June 29 — Wheat was irregular on the board of trade today but showed little change from yesterday's close. Corn and oats were fractionally higher.

Wheat opened 1-8c off to 1-8c up; corn was 1-8c to 1-2c higher and oats was up 1-4 to 3-8c. Provisions were unchanged.

Clear weather is in prospect for the southwest wheat belt and harvesting on a large scale is expected to start soon. The spring wheat crop is doing well, but an average yield is unlikely because o fthe prolong dry spells that have hindered the crop. Traders are awaiting the report on private exports which will be issued next Monday.

July corn jumped at the close of trading yesterday as the result of heavy rains over the belt. The deferred deliveries were slightly easier, however, in view of favorable weather reports. The belt had more heavy rains over night.

Traders have been showing little interest in oats, and that commodity continued to be chiefly influenced by the other grains. The belt had more precipation yesterday. Warm, dry weather is needed in most sections.

LOCAL NEWSPAPERS

This is an era of criticism. Nearly everyone is finding fault with something. Even the newspapers are getting their share of the blame for present conditions. When anything goes wrong and are criticized for the kind of news they print as well as for their editorial policy. In this connection it is well to recall something that Whitelaw Reid, at the time editor of the New York Tribune, said on the subject.

"The thing always forgotten by the closest critic of the newspapers is that they must be immeasurably what their audiences make them; what their constituencies call for and sustain. The newspaper cannot uniformly resist the pouplar sentiment any more than the stream can flow above its fountain. To say that the newspapers are getting worse is to say that the people are getting worse. They may work more evil now than they have ever wrought before, because the influence is more wide spread; but they also work more good, and the habitual attitude of the newspaper is one of effort toward the best its audiences will tolerate."

There is food for considerable thought here. Of course in the great cities there are different kinds of newspapers, conservative journals, progressive journals and yellow journals, each with a particular field to cover. But if it is true that newspapers are what their readers make them, then there is much to be said for the reading public in our smaller communities. For in these communities there is little in the way of yellow journalism and journalistic sensationalism. The small city and country newspapers, are remarkably free from the taint, and little of it comes in from the outside for the reason that the people in these soundly American communities prefer the less sensational journals when they get a newspaper from the metropolitan field.

WHAT IS A PLAYGROUND?

What is a city playground, anyway? Is it just "a place for the children to play," serving no other purpose? Or is it a vital part of the city, exercising a far-reaching influence on apparently unrelated matters?

The Regional Plan Committee of New York, studying the problem, has concluded that the function of providing for public recreation is one of the city's most important tasks. If parks and playground facilities are not made handy to the congested centers of population, crime increases, property values go down and, in the end, there may even come an exodus of residents from the city. A city's growth, prosperity and well-being are closely bound-up with the matter of recreation facilities.

It's a more important matter than we often realize. No city can devote too much attention to it.

IF NEWSPAPERS STOPPED

No paper on the doorstep. Newsstands unnaturally bare. Car riders watching familiar landscapes as their trains rush cityward, instead of renewing their contacts with the happenings of the four continents. The world seeming strangely out of joint. Store sales sagging abruptly, for only the store windows remain to tell the daily bargains. Finance, always dependent on the latest news, thrown back upon the thin stream of information trickling through the "ticker tape." A city cut off mentally from the outside world.

Twenty-eight years before George Washington was born the first American newspaper was established. Increasingly, during the 200-odd years that have intervened, the newspaper has become a matter of course in the American home.

In this day and age one can scarcely conceive a world without newspapers. They are a very port of the fabric of daily life, universally in demand—a running record of world events, human achievements, pathos, tragedy, scientific progress -- every conceivable activity.—Anglo-California Trust Co. Bulletin.

The Rambler

By NORMAN W. RALSTON

LAZY

Like to idle
In the sun
On a summer
Day,
'Though my weary
Job's not done,
Should I fret
Today
When the entire
World's at peace
Doesn't summer bring
Surcease;
Like to loll around
And dream
Of another world,
Everything
Will different seem
When you are all
Curled
On some mossy,
Green-turfed bank
Listless as an Iron tank;
Like to think of
Other folks,
Other climes and
Stranger scenes,
Of this Life's
Unusual jokes,
Summer weans
Us away from routine
Drab
Takes us on a fairy slab;
Far off on those hazy hills
I can see from where
I doze,
There's a receipe for
Ills,
There's the fragrance
Of a rose—
Where is there a
Single man
Who's content
With Life's great
Plan!—

And what we mean to say
Is,
Take yourself, just now
And then,
From your crowded,
Daily pen,
Dream awhile and reach
Afar
For your fairy,
Distant star—
Does us good, just now
And then
To forget that we
Are men!

Man never seems to be worried about success. But success is often a cause of worry after he gets it. Happiness is in finding content in what you already possess.

In Holland, Bob Ryder has discovered, the length of a telephone conversation is officially limited to six minutes and that wouldn't give the good old girls of our set time to find out when and where the luncheon was to be, even.

They couldn't even ask the party at the other end of the line what she was going to wear, Bob.

"Sometimes," observed Mr. Henpeck today, "I'm inclined to believe the world is slipping. I was just reading last night that in the old days the Indian men hunted and fished while the women did all the work."

We have only seen 2,313 pictures of bathing beauties this season to date as compared with 2,412 last season this same time, and now what does that prove!

BRAWN BUT NO BEAUTY

I'd like to be an elephant
So I could trounce my foes
But at the same time I would hate
To have his snouty nose.

We would like to sneak into her home some morning and watch the girl who picks at her food at a bridge luncheon, observing that she's on a diet, eat her breakfast, and we'll bet she says more than once, "Pass the bacon and eggs, please!"

Coolidge ought to be able to catch fish. He's going to take most of the summer to do it.

Some people's idea of the extreme right hand side of the road is half-way over the middle.

"TENDERLOIN," starring Dolores Costello, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

A satchel containing $200,000 has been stolen from the Mercer National Bank. The Professor, leader of a gang of crooks, suspects pretty Rose Shannon, a cabaret dancer, of knowing where the money is. Hoping that she may give the game away inadvertently, he assigns Chuck White, one of his gangsters, to invite Rose with him to visit a supposed "aunt" of Chuck's in the country. Chuck falls in love with Rose, and when she tearfully denies all knowledge of the robbery, he determines to protect her. Angered by Chuck's failure the Professor arrives with his gang. Chuck tells him that Rose knows nothing of the stolen money.

CHAPTER XV—Continued

"Look here, Professor," Chuck began as the others fell back slightly at Heminway's command. "I ain't stalling an' I ain't trying to put nothing over on you. I admit I was sore as hell at this jane, an' I was going to get even with her if it was the last thing I did. I mushes around her; sure, I think she's got the dough, an' I ain't gonna let her get away with nothing. But get this, Professor. The kid's story's straight."

The Professor sniffed. "So's the road to the pen," he retorted curtly. "I suppose you believe all that gaff about her finding the keister on the street, too," he taunted.

"I sure do," Chuck returned. "Lissen she didn't have no time to make a getaway with the coin. She

"You stay away from that jane or I'll—" leans me an' beats it. It's about a quarter to two then. She rushes down th' street, falls over the keister, picks it up, an' th' bulls nab her. Now I ask you! Does she have time to—"

"Sure she does, ya damn fool! Are ya crippled under de hair?" Dapper shot out his words, unable to keep his silence any longer.

"Be quiet!" The Professor checked him sharply. "Well? Go on!" he returned to Chuck. He raised his eyebrows, smiling slightly.

"Well, I asks her today, right out, does she know anything about the jack—"

"Ya damn, lousy gorilla! Lemme at 'im!" The Mug made a rush for Chuck, but the Professor stepped in front of him, warding off the attack.

"Just a moment. I intend to get to the bottom of this. Now we're going to see what's what. I'll have a little talk with that young lady, myself." He started for the stairs, his wooden leg thumping gruesomely on the bare floor.

"Not by a long shot, you don't! You stay 'way from that jane or I'll bust your bean open, you dirty skunk, you!" Chuck leapt in front of the stairway, his fists doubled up.

"That's exactly what I wanted to know," the Professor sneered. "Why, you dirty, double-crossing rat! Don't you think I see through your game? Don't you think I know what you're up to, you and that jane? You two planning to skip with the jack right from under my nose!"

"You're damn right that's wot he's doin'," Molly shrieked, starting towards the boy. "I heard plenty to know that. I was waitin' to spill th' beans if I got a chanct. They was up on the hill, plannin' the get-away, that's what they was doin'. An' I hears th' two of 'em in here tonight, an' he's tellin' her wot to fergit what he's told her."

"Yeh, an' I wants dat jack!" the Mug roared, his bull-like neck scarlet, his heavy under-jaw thrust forward. "I wants my split, dat's wot. Dat's wot I come fer, an' I'm gonna git it. Git outta my way!"

"You and me both," Lefty sprang forward.

"All right, boys," The Professor laughed. "It's all yours."

At his signal the two gangsters suddenly hurled themselves upon Chuck. Their fists shot out like lightning; their heads ducked for the charge. But like a flash Chuck dodged, barely escaping their blows. With a mad cry he flung himself at the Professor. His hands fastened about Heminway's throat. The sudden impact overbalanced the older man; he crashed to the floor, Chuck on top of him, shaking him like a rat.

"You let her alone, I tell you!" The boy was shouting, his fingers burying themselves in the loose flesh of the man's neck. "You let her alone, you—"

But Mug and Lefty were already at him again, their hands tearing him from his victim; their blows raining about his head, his chest, his back. His fingers loosed their grip, as the two gorillas seized him by the arms, dragging him to his feet. Blindly he gave back blow for blow. With an almost supernatural effort, he wrenched himself free from their restraining clasps. Beating them back, he rushed for the stairway. But clutching hands tore at him, stopping him, forcing him to turn again.

But the boy stood his ground, kicking, sending blow after blow smashing downwards. He mustn't let them get to Rose—he mustn't let them! He mustn't! He mustn't! The words ran round and round in his head like a maddening refrain. He must hold them back; keep them from advancing towards that second floor where the girl lay sleeping.

The Sparrow, cowering in his corner, watched with horrified, yet fascinated eyes. In the dim light he could see them forcing Chuck back; hear the thud of bare fists against flesh and bone. It made him sick. He covered his eyes with his arm, but he could not shut out that hideous sound of dull thumping; the crack of knuckles as they came in contact with hardened muscles.

Step by step they were forcing Chuck upward. Step by step his blows were growing weaker and weaker. It was a grim, silent struggle now. His head was ringing from the shattering knocks. Arms swung out at him like battering rams. One eye was closed. The hot blood trickled down his face and hardened in clotted drops. His lips were swollen. His mouth was dry. His breath came in short, sobbing gasps. Things began to swim about him. He could no longer distinguish shapes. Suddenly the world went black. He dropped down, motionless, sprawling over the stairs.

"All right, tie him up!" the Professor ordered, his voice thick from the strangulation effected by Chuck.

Lefty, gasping for breath, pulled a stout piece of cord from his pocket. Molly fell back, panting from her exertions, while Mug and Lefty bound Chuck's hands securely behind him as he lay on the floor. The Professor tossed them a handkerchief. Quickly they bound an efficient gag over the boy's mouth. He began to stir slightly, opening his one good eye, blinking in the dim light.

The Professor moved over beside Molly. "Better get him out of here," he murmured, "I want to speak to the girl myself. I think I can induce her to do a little talking."

"Sure," Molly nodded in agreement. "Where do we go from here?"

"Is there a train back to New York tonight?"

"What's th' time?"

The Professor consulted his watch. "Just eleven," he answered.

"Le's see." Molly went over to the small escritoire, took out a time table, and consulted it. "Here 'tis. Eleven forty-five—th' last train out. We c'n make it. Git him out in th' bus." She pointed to the semi-inert figure of the boy.

Barely catching the mumbled words, Chuck shook his head violently, endeavoring to loosen the gag in his mouth. But at a sign from the Professor, the Mug and Lefty lifted him to his feet, supporting him on either side, and started him towards the door. The Professor threw open the portal. A sudden gust of rain caught him full in the face. A sharp clap of thunder resounded through the air. But Lefty and Mug, dragging the silently protesting Chuck with them struggled out towards the carriage and pushed him into the rear seat.

"Jeez, wotta night!" the Mug mumbled. "Wouldn'tcha know it!"

"Glad I got that benny with me." Lefty ran ahead and into the house, leaving his companion to guard Chuck. "It's raining cats an' dogs," he announced.

"Now look here," the Professor began, "I want you to get Chuck back to the place, and keep him there. And no monkey business. I'll be in in the morning with the milk train. And if any dicks come snooping around, you shut up like a clam. There's nobody home, understand. I'll have a story cooked up for them by the time I get back. Molly," he called, "are you ready? Get on out there, Sparrow."

"Yep, all set," Molly announced, appearing in the kitchen doorway, a big plaid mackintosh buttoned closely about her.

right between these two live cities, hasn't had anything, with nothing in prospect. You can't get things in this world unless you go out and get them. And you cannot get them by sitting around and merely talking about them, or hearing other people say, "Well, we ought to do this," or "we ought to do that." Why not, instead, put words into action and when conventions meet in other cities in Ohio send a delegation from your body or chapter or organization that belongs to that order to that convention, and invite them to make Circleville their next meteing place. Conventions give publicity to a city; publicity attracts the attention of everyone including manufacturers. And we could use a few good, live manufacturing plants in this city and county. Let's show everyone that we want them to come to Circleville at some time or other. Let's not always live within ourselves.

ACCEPTED INVITATION

PLENTY OF MINERALS GOOD FOR INFANTS

Milk, Fruit and Vegetables Contain the Elements Necessary to the Upbuilding of Strong, Healthy Bodies.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

IN the Springtime when the chickens were being hatched, all the newspapers carried articles about how to feed the young things. The poultry editor and reporters wrote pages on feeding. "Minerals for the Chicks," "Green Food for the Chicks"—every conceivable bit of advice was printed for the benefit of the poultry raiser.

DR. COPELAND

I applaud this. It speaks well for the enterprise of the newspapers that they print this informative material. It is a sign of progress that the raisers of poultry are eager for the information and follow the instructions.

As I write, I have before me one of these articles. Here is a quotation: "In the care of the chick, if he is to grow to good size, remain vigorous and healthy, and if he is to grow a suitable frame, provide for adequate flesh development, he must have in his diet considerable mineral elements."

Then this sensible writer continues: "Minerals serve two very distinct functions. They are used directly in building bony tissue for the framework of the body. Bone is quite largely lime and phosphorous. In addition, there is a second and even more important function of minerals, and that is to increase the efficiency of the other foods fed."

Here is another wise statement: "There is another function which minerals are assumed to possess, and which is being given more attention, that minerals seem to be able to build up the body, making it able to resist disease and infections of various kinds. An insufficient amount of mineral not only means poorly grown and small stature and incomplete digestion, but the scarcity also means lowered vitality and tendency to disease."

Every word of this statement can be applied to human beings. It is just as true of babies. There must be minerals for the growth of the baby's bones. He must have lime and phosphorous if he is to thrive.

For the same reason, the baby must have minerals to build up resistance to diseases which are watching for a weak place to make attack. Proper food wards off disease.

One of the reasons why milk is such a valuable food for growing children is because it is rich in minerals. It contains sulphur, phosphorous, soda, potash, lime, magnesium, iron and iodine.

The fruits and vegetables carry large percentages of mineral substances. They are necessary additions to the diet of the child.

There is another reason why milk, fruits and vegetables are essential. They contain the mysterious vitamins which have everything to do with growth, health and resistance to disease.

Certainly a baby is just as important as a brood of chicks. Let us use as much scientific care in the feeding of the babies and then we will have a bigger, a healthier and a hardier race.

Answers to Health Queries

A. A. Q.—What is a remedy for dandruff?

A.—I would advise you to shampoo your hair frequently, using a good pure soap and apply a stimulating tonic to the scalp every other night. For full details send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

BIBLE THOUGHT

FRIENDLINESS — A man that hath friends must show himself friendly; and there is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother.

PRAYER:— O Thou friend of sinners, befriend me and I will try and be a friend to others.

WHEN SUCCESS IS POOR

John Lunsman, St. Louis junkyard keeper, died the other day at the age of 86, leaving a fortune of slightly more than $250,000.

For long years he had lived a life of privation, engaged in mean tasks, depriving himself of pleasure, comfort, decent surroundings, friendships, devoting himself solely to the task of saving money. He had succeeded; his quarter of a million dollars attests it.

Yet even in America, where money is placed on the highest of pinnacles, it would be hard to find many people to agree that the old chap hed led an enviable or admirable life.

You can get just about what you want out of life if you care to pay the price. You can use life as the means to an end, subordinating everything in it to the one thing you are seeking, making, making every act have reference to your goal; and, like the old St. Louis junk dealer, you will be successful.

Or you can look on life as something of an end in itself. You can view it as an experience; something that can be made to yield richness and fragrance from the first to last. If you do that you will have time for little diversions along the way—time for the experience of love, friendship, devotion, self-sacrifice, fidelity and courage. Those are the things that often have to be thrown overboard if one has too much singleness of purpose. But they are, in the main, the things that make life worth living.

Old John Lunsman had 86 years and $250,000 when he died; yet for all that, he can hardly be said really to have lived at all. He had his goal and he gained it, but you could not find anyone to say that it was worth the price he paid. And while few people sacrifice as much to get as little as he did, his case is nevertheless a valuable object lesson.

There is too much of a tendency to regard material success as the sole criterion by which life can be judged. It would be fine to be Henry Ford, no doubt; yet beyond question, there are machanics in Henry Ford's factories, salesmen in his own salesrooms, who have had more honest enjoyment out of life than Ford has had.

We need to be a little bit less in earnest about life. To much looking to the future is apt to lead to an ignoring of the present. There is something to be said for the wisdom of the grasshopper as opposed to the wisdom of the ant.

FAMILIARITY

Dr. John R. Mott, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. national council, told a meeting of New York business men the other day that as nations are being brought closer together by improved transportation and communication they are reacting on each other "with increasing virulence" and are thereby drifting gradually closer toward war.

That is rather surprising. We used to assume that bringing the nations closer together would make them more neighborly. Every advance in transportation and communication, such as the airplane and the radio, has been hailed as a force that would make for world peace. But Dr. Mott doesn't see it that way.

Maybe it's only natural that it should work out that way, at that. Individuals often remain more friendly if they don't see each other too often; it's usually easier to be friends with a man living a block away than with the next-door neighbor. Perhaps it's the same with nations.

THE THIRD TERM PRECEDENT

The most magnificant thing about the final retirement of President Coolidge, is that the third term precedent is not to be broken though whether this had any part in Mr. Coolidge's decision is not at all clear.

Opinions differ greatly as to whether a third presidential term would be any menace. But the fact that many people feel it would be, acts as a barrier tending to prevent any president from obtaining it. The burden of the office is so heavy that most presidents who have had a second term have been glad enough to quit their heavy job. And the burden grows worse and worse every year.

The American people seem to squeeze the life out a president in a double term, and few men would have the vitality or energy with which to pick up the load for four years more.

SWIMMIN'

Remember the Ol' swimmin'
Pool
Where you whiled
Away hours as a
Boy,
Glad to be skippin'
Your school
Just for a half-day
Of joy;
King of a king with
Crown
Of leaves on your
Head, and for hours
You would sit
Stern with a frown
Building your
Fairyland bowers—
Kind of a ruler,
You were
Dreaming out there
On the bank,
Dreamin' sometimes
Just of Her,
Unwilling to step
From your rank;
Plannin' for days
When you'd
Grow
Into the manhood of Life—
Ah, millions the
Seeds you would
Sow,
There far removed
From the strife—
Who wouldn't
Give half his years,
Just to be back
There again,
Hard to keep back
All these tears,
Old age came in
With the
Rain—

And what we mean to say
Is,
Heroes have sat by
These pools,
Planning their dreams
When mere boys,
Older folks oft called
Them fools,
Trying to break up
Their joys,
But Life, 'though it
Sometimes seems stern
Lets the dreamer dream
On with his pet
And those who may
This same man
Spurn
Have not arrived
With their dreams
Yet.

It's a funny thing but it always seems to us that a man acts like a poor sport when he acts like he hasn't had enough—of anything.

Upon learning yesterday, says Bob Ryder, that the hair on the human arm grows in a downward direction below the elbow and upwards above the elbow, just exactly like a monkey's, and checking up on it, the leading fundamentalist of this neighborhood went upstairs and shaved all over.

That seems to us, Bob, to have been an unncessary precaution. A man who is a monkey will always be one, hairs or no!

What has become of the old-fashioned bride and groom who used to think they had to wait until a tunnel came along before they kissed each other when riding in a train?

"TENDERLOIN," starring Dolores Costello, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

A satchel containing $200,000 has been stolen from the Mercer National Bank. The police suspect the Professor, leader of a gang of crooks, of being involved. The Professor, however, believes that lovely Rose Shannon, a cabaret dancer, knows where the money is hidden. He assigns Chuck White, one of his country to visit Chuck's supposed gangsters, to invite her to the country to visit Chuck's supposed "aunt," hoping that she may give herself away during her stay. Chuck falls in love with Rose, and when she tearfully denies all knowledge of the robbery, he decides to protect her. Angered by Chuck's failure, the Professor arrives on the scene himself.

"I'm so glad to meet you, Miss Shannon," Dapper held out his hand, bowing low, assuming his most impressive smile.

"Oh, I'm just so glad you all came." Rose looked about the room, smiling at Mug and Sparrow. "Aren't you, Aunt Molly?"

"I sure am," Molly agreed, giving the Mug a knowing wink.

"Tell me, have you two been having a good time?" the Professor questioned, looking at Rose and Chuck.

"Oh, we been having a grand time," Rose laughed. "We been walking and canoeing, and the flowers are lovely, and I feed the chickens—I just love it, and I can't thank you—"

"Now, now—no thanks at all, young lady. I'm only too glad to see the roses back in your cheeks again." Heminway pinched the girl's glowing face teasingly.

"I'll do th' talking from now on."

Chuck bit his lip to keep back the angry torrent of words that flooded his mouth. He hated seeing this old charlatan assuming such proprietory interest in the girl—hated seeing Rose duped by such an unscrupulous fakir. He'd have it all out with him later and put an end to everything this very evening.

They were seating themselves about the fire, now a rather silent group, somewhat ill at ease—all, that is, save the Professor and Rose, who chatted gaily away about the country and New York and all the little trivialities of the day. The others were quiet, fearing to speak too much lest they should give themselves away.

The entire atmosphere, as seen by a casual observer, suggested peaceful domesticity. But behind it all there were quick, suspicious glances, strained attention, furtive looks. Molly, leaning back in her armchair, stroking the cat, was watching the Professor and smiling cynically at Mug as the man played his game with the girl. Lefty was lolling back comfortably, but his right foot beat a nervous tatoo as he waited eagerly for the real "fun" to start. And Sparrow gazed helplessly at Chuck, half scenting that things had not turned out as they had all hoped.

Finally, Chuck, anxious to hear something, whether good or bad, moved towards the corner where Sparrow was sitting and leaned over his chair.

"What's it all about?" he questioned, his voice so low that it sounded only like a mumble to the others in the room.

"Hell's poppin'," Sparrow returned out of the side of his mouth.

"Anything new on the stick-up?" Chuck asked.

"Nope, not'in'. Th' dicks is tailin' th' bank people. An' t'hey ain't gotta t'ing. 'Ey was out all day roundin' up th' teller. 'Ey been houndin' us, but—"

"They don't know nothing about this ranch, do they?"

"Naw, 'ey come aroun' lookin' fer youse, but th' Prof tells 'em we ain't got no idea where ya gone. He tells 'em he guesses maybe youse eloped with th' goil, but we ain't seen youse. Ya got th' yella ticket?"

"Yep, this afternoon," Chuck nodded. "Jeez, Sparrow, this is a hell of a mess. Rose didn't have nothing to do with this here racket."

"Try an' tell 'at to th' ole man. He's hell bent fer heaven on 'is here. Somebuddy's gonna git it in th' neck. Cripes, I hope it tain't gonna be youse, big fella." He looked up at Chuck admiringly. "Say, lissen, ya remember 'at yella-haired dame up to Fazenda's? Well, she's took up wit 'Red' Moran now."

"Yeah?" Chuck's lack of interest was so evident that Sparrow looked at him curiously.

"Well, you was kinda playin' aroun' wit her, wasn't youse?"

"Maybe—but that ain't now," Chuck retorted quickly. "Say, lissen, Sparrow. I'm through with all that, see? I gotta crush on this dame that's nobody's business. And you ain't heard me say nothing like that before, have you?"

"My Gawd!" Sparrow looked up at Chuck, his eyes widening with interest. It seemed impossible to believe—that Chuck White had actually admitted that he had fallen for a jane.

"I tell you, Sparrow, Rose's as straight as a die. There ain't a crooked thing about her. An', Sparrow, I got a hunch there's gonna be trouble tonight. An' if there is, where're you gonna be?"

"Say, whatcha astin' foolish questions fer? Ya know where I'm gonna be. You an' me, we alllus sticks toget'er, don't we? I ain't no heel."

"Atta boy, Sparrow. Say, it'll sure be great to see li'l old New York again." He raised his voice, smiling at the same time, for he could see that Molly was straining to catch the trend of his conversation. He felt a little more relieved, for he knew that he could trust Sparrow.

For a while there was silence. Mug and Lefty squirmed uneasily in their chairs, anxious to be left with their crew, so that they might talk freely once more. The Professor drummed his fingers nervously on the arm of his chair, eager to have Chuck and Molly to himself and find out what had happened. The clock sounded ten warning strokes. Molly yawned openly.

"Well, I guess I ought to go to bed," Rose, feeling that the others might have matters to go over which were none of her concern, got up and prepared to say good-night. "I know you got lots of things to talk about."

"No, no, not at all, my dear." The Professor got to his feet, taking the girl's hand in his. "We shall only be sorry to be deprived of your company. But we shall see you in the morning."

"Good night, Mr. Sparrow—good night, everybody," she nodded.

Chuck followed Rose to the stairway. "Don't forget what I told you, sweetheart," he whispered, squeezing her hand.

"I won't, dear." She disappeared up the steps, the glow of the lamp in her hand fading slowly away.

CHAPTER XV

As the last vestige of Rose disappeared up the stairs, Mug heaved a sigh of relief and took out his hip flask. Silently he drank and passed the container on to Lefty, who followed suit, and then turned it over to Molly. The woman gulped, swallowed, and then passed the flask on to Chuck, lighting a cigarette. The boy shook his head and handed it on to the Professor, who waved it away and rose, facing his new opponent belligerently.

"Well, what have you got to say for yourself?" he demanded.

"Nothing." Chuck thrust his hands deep into his pockets and returned the Professor's stare coolly.

"Nothing? What the hell do you think you've been doing down here, anyhow?"

"Doin'? I'll tell ya what he's been doin,'" Molly interrupted, planting herself squarely between the two, her flabby, dissipated face leering triumphantly. "He ain't been doin' nut'in', but mushin' up wit' th' moll—that dirty, little—"

"You shut your trap, will ya!" Chuck turned suddenly, raising his fist menacingly. "I'll do th' talking from now on. An' if you open your face to say one word about that girl, I'll—"

"Ah, since when has Mr. Charles White become a Squire of Dames?" Heminway snorted.

"I ain't got nothing to do with dames," Chuck exploded, his face flushing angrily. "There's only one dame I'm interested in, and that's this Rose Shannon. Now get this!" He pounded his fist on the table to emphasize his statements. "This dame don't know a damn thing about that jack. We was dead wrong. She's straight through and through."

"Say, how ja git dat way!" The Mug took a step forward, his lower jaw thrust out in scorn and disbelief.

"Be quiet, all of you!" Heminway held up a warning hand. "Now, Mr. Chuck White, will you explain yourself?"

ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS MADE SMITH PLANK

Farm Aid Also Promised In Platform Written by Democratic Convention.

BY PAUL R. MALLON
(United Press Staff Correspondent

HOUSTON, June 29.—Gov. Alfred E. Smith will run on a platform pledging honest law enforcement and substantial farm relief, written around the slogan of Andrews Jackson: "Turn the rascals out."

The platform was adopted by the Democratic party as represented in its national convention here with scarcely a dissenting voice just before the roll call upon which Smith was nominated.

The unanimity of opinion among the wets anad drys, McNary-Haugenites and farm conservatives, antis and pros of all principles was demonstrated when Gov. Dan Moody of Texas ,who undertook the role of Boy Bryan dry leader here and Governor Ritchie of Maryland, a spokesman of the wets and declined to submit a minority reports although both spoke from the platform of their views. No other minority reports were offered.

Rewrite Dry Plank.

The prohibition plank was rewritten by Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, the most ardent of enthusiastic drys, it said:

"The Republican party, for eight years in complete control of the government at Washington, presents the spectacle of feeling compelled in its national platform to promise obedience to a provision of the federal constitution which it has flagrantly disregarded and to apologize to the country for its failure to enforce laws enacted by the congress of the United States.

"Speaking for the national democracy, this convention pledges the party and its nominee to an honest effort to enforce the eighteenth amendment and all other provisions of the federal constitution and all laws enacted pursuant thereto."

Eliminate Statement

Glass succeeded in eliminating from the report as presented by the committee, a statement as to how the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act could be repealed. He accepted the plank as it stood although he is an earnest opponent of Smith. Moody explained he had fought for the bone-dry plank adopted by the Texas state convention and Ritchie said he adhered to the plank without sacrificing his argument that prohibition usurped the rights of states.

In the final analysis, however, everyone seemed to agree about everything and Smith appeared to have obtained as near an acquiescent endorsement from the bone-dry south as he could possibly receive.

The farm relief plank spoke in no specific terms about the McNary-Haugen equalization fee system but it promised agriculture about everything a democratic convention could offer without endorsing a Republican bill. It offered a federal farm board system to handle the surplus, development of cooperative marketing facilities and every possible effort to diminish the spread between the producers' sale price and the consumers' buying price.

Cite G. O. P. Corruption

But the convention chose "Republican corruption" as the big issue upon which the party will set Smith to battle in November against Herbert Hoover, the Republican nominee. This plank was second among the 30 planks running about 6,000 words.

"Shocking thieveries," "sordid corruption and unabashed rascality," "compounded frauds," and "startling depravities" were the terms used by the platform to describe what the Democrats considered Republican iniquities, such as charged in the oil scandals, and campaign expenditures investigations.

"The watchword of the day should be: 'Turn the rascals out'," the plank concluded.

The remedy for agricultural ills must be found in one of the four following things, the platform committee told the convention:

1—Credit loans by the government to co-operatives on a basis similar to government aid for the merchant marine.

2—Creation of a federal farm board to assist the farmer in marketing as the federal reserve board has done for the banker and business man.

3—Reduction of the spread between the price the farmer sells for and the price the consumer pays, aimed apparently to reduce the profits of the middleman and the cost of transportation.

4—Consideration of agricultural conditions in formulation of government financial and tax measures.

Foreign Plank

The foreign relations plank included: Outlawry of war; "freedom from entangling political alliance with foreign nations"; protection of American lives and rights; non-interference in the Democratic affairs of foreign countries, including particularly Mexico, Nicaragua and all other Latin-American nations; promotion of international arbitration, conciliation and limitation of armaments by agreement; full and free co-operation with other nations for promotion of peace aand justice; abolition of the practice of permitting the president to enter de facto or de jure agreements with foreign countries; recognition of the Monroe doctrine.

"HANDS OFF"

Fred Humes in "Hands Off" at the Grand is a good picture tonight. They warned him, "hands off," but he did not take the hint and finds himself in a whirlwind of adventures, thru his timely meddling.

COMEDY AND ROMANCE

All the world loves a comedy—and all the world loves a love story. Wherefore in "Circus Rookies," the new co-starring effort of Karl Dane and George K. Arthur, those redoubtable heroes of "Rookies," has been achieved a picture that everyone certainly should like. It has all the hilarious comedy in the world, plus a very pretty love story, all woven together into a liting cocktail of mirth and entertainment.

The new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, now playing at the Metropolital theatre, plunges the heroes into a series of circus adventures. Dane, a roustabout, gets a job as animal trainer and Arthur gets the post of press agent, and then the fun begins. There is a huge gorilla in the picture, too—he chases the heroes over a careening circus train, and Arthur gets tangled up with a trapeze, and thrills and laughs mix in profusion.

Letters To the Editor

ANSWERS JUSTIN

Circleville, O., June 28, 1928.
To The Editor Circleville Herald:

In reply to Justin's letter to the editor, relative to he being held up at South Court crossing last Sunday morning, account a southbound freight train passing over crossing.

He asks why the crossing gates were not raised immediately after the southbound train had passed. Why ask that question when he admits a northbound was on the same crossing in just one minute or two, after the southbound had passed.

I am working under the authority of the Norfolk and Western Railway Co., and not under the authority of a citizen of Circleville.

Our instruction from the company is "Safety First." "Do not take any chances."

It would have been fool hardy in me to have raised the gates and permit "Justin" try to beat the rapidly approaching train to the crossing, not only placing his life in jeopardy but a score of others who were waiting.

Had I taken a chance, raised the gates and "Justin" had been badly injured possibly killed with a number of others then what?

I would have disobeyed the rules of the company, also be censured by the public, and arrested for manslaughter.

We are only trying to protect life at the crossing, not trying to hold people up.

I am sorry "Justin" was late for church and can only suggest he start to church a little earlier for he may meet with the same existing circumstances next Sunday and many Sundays to come.

HOME WEDDING OF MISS STEIN

The setting was yellow and white for the wedding of Miss Louise Stein, daughter of Mrs. Kate Stein, and Mr. Roy Brown son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Brown, of East Ringgold, which took place Thursday evening at 6 o'clock at the bride's home on E. Main-st.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. G. J. Troutman, in front of an improvised altar, made of ferns and white Madonna lilies. Other flowers in this room were yellow and white. The bride and bridegroom were unattended and walked to the altar together. Her wedding dress was of white georgette, made with long sleeves and a two tiered accordion pleated skirt. Her slippers were black satin and she carried a bouquet of white bride's roses.

Immediately following the ceremony, a wedding dinner was served to a few members of the immediate families who were the only guests at the wedding. On the bride's table the center decoration was a tall basket of yellow snapdragons. From the handle of the basket, tulle streamers extended to each corner of the table. The place cards were bride and bride grooms, while the nut cups were dainty baskets, also of yellow. The other guests were served at small card tables in the room where the ceremony had taken place.

Those seated at the bride's table were the bride and bridegroom, the bride's mother, Mrs. Kate Stein, Mrs. Mary E. Stein, and Mr. and Mrs. M. I. Brown. The other guests were Mrs. Frank Marion, Miss Ethel Stein, Mrs. Fred Newhouse, Mr. Clarence Stein and the Rev. and Mrs. G. J. Troutman. Miss Helen Mack and Miss Florence Lathouse, close friends of the bride assisted with the serving. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Harris of Columbus, were the only out-of-town guests.

The bridal couple left after the dinner for a short wedding trip, after which they will reside at the home of the bride's mother on E. Main-st.

Mrs. Brown's traveling costume was a dress of golden brown pussy-willow satin, flowered with daisies. She wore a coat of the same color, with shoes, hat and gloves to match.

50 COUPLES AT COMMENCEMENT DANCE

In spite of the rainy night Thursday, there were more than 50 couples who enjoyed the commencement dance at the Athletic club. Many more persons had planned to attend from out-of-town, but due to the downpour, were unable to be present. Those who were there enjoyed the affair and especially the good music, which gave the affair a world of pep.

Among those from out-of-town at the dance were Miss Georgia Bower and Mr. James Bradshaw, of Columbus; Bill Radcliffe and Miss Mary Catherine Hurst, of Williamsport; Miss Virginia Denman, of Arlington, Columbus and Miss Bertha Geile of Madison, Ind.

RETIRING OFFICERS RECEIVE UNIQUE CORSAGES

The out-going officers of the Business and Professional Women's club of Circleville, arranged and served a delicious two course dinner to 40 guests at 6:30 o'clock Thursday evening in the Chamber of Commerce rooms. Their guests were the members of the club and especially the in-coming officers of the organization.

The rooms were made most attractive with artistic placing of garden flowers, including lilies, hydrangeas and Dorothy Perkins roses. At each place was a small corsage, as favors for the guests. These corsages were unique, as favors for a club of this kind, since they were made of a bride's rose in the center, surrounded by matrimonial vine, intertwined in bachelor buttons.

The regular business meeting was conducted, after the dinner, and just preceded the program which was in charge of Mrs. Anna Chandler. Mrs. Mary Morris as out-going president, was the first to be called on for a speech, to which she responded.

A humorous feature of the program was the presentation of vegetable bouquets to the retiring officers, by the new officers. Mrs. Morris, president, received a fresh bunch of sweet smelling peas, but not sweet peas; Miss Minnie Palm, vice president, was honored with a corsage of beets; Dr. Isa B. Carr, treasurer, received an elegant onion; Miss Nelle Anderson, secretary, was given a bunch of attractive green beans.

A bunch of lettuce was Miss Blanche Valentine's reward for service as treasurer, and Miss Anna Shea as corresponding secretary was awarded the jewel of them all—the corsage of spinach.

Each gift was presented by one of the new officers, who are Mrs. Harry Stevenson, president; Miss Helen Rowe, vice president; Miss Ruth Steele, secretary; Dr. Isa B. Carr, treasurer and Mrs. Anna Chandler, corresponding secretary.

50 COUPLES AT COMMENCEMENT DANCE

In spite of the rainy night Thursday, there were more than 50 couples who enjoyed the commencement dance at the Athletic club. Many more persons had planned to attend from out-of-town, but due to the downpour, were unable to be present. Those who were there enjoyed the affair and especially the good music, which gave the affair a world of pep.

Among those from out-of-town at the dance were Miss Georgia Bower and Mr. James Bradshaw, of Columbus; Bill Radcliffe and Miss Mary Catherine Hurst, of Williamsport; Miss Virginia Denman, of Arlington, Columbus and Miss Bertha Geile of Madison. Ind.

RETIRING OFFICERS RECEIVE UNIQUE CORSAGES

The out-going officers of the Business and Professional Women's club of Circleville, arranged and served a delicious two course dinner to 40 guests at 6:30 o'clock Thursday evening in the Chamber of Commerce rooms. Their guests were the members of the club and especially the in-coming officers of the organization.

The rooms were made most attractive with artistic placing of garden flowers, including lilies, hydrangeas and Dorothy Perkins roses. At each place was a small corsage, as favors for the guests. These corsages were unique, as favors for a club of this kind, since they were made of a bride's rose in the center, surrounded by matrimonial vine, intertwined in bachelor buttons.

The regular business meeting was conducted, after the dinner, and just preceded the program which was in charge of Mrs. Anna Chandler. Mrs. Mary Morris as out-going president, was the first to be called on for a speech, to which she responded.

A humorous feature of the program was the presentation of vegetable bouquets to the retiring officers, by the new officers. Mrs. Morris, president, received a fresh bunch of sweet smelling peas, but not sweet peas; Miss Minnie Palm, vice president, was honored with a corsage of beets; Dr. Isa B. Carr, treasurer, received an elegant onion; Miss Nelle Anderson, secretary, was given a bunch of attractive green beans.

A bunch of lettuce was Miss Blanche Valentine's reward for service as treasurer, and Miss Anna Shea as corresponding secretary was awarded the jewel of them all—the corsage of spinach.

Each gift was presented by one of the new officers, who are Mrs. Harry Stevenson, president; Miss Helen Rowe, vice president; Miss Ruth Steele, secretary; Dr. Isa B. Carr, treasurer and Mrs. Anna Chandler, corresponding secretary.

BIBLE THOUGHT

FRIENDLINESS — A man that hath friends must show himself friendly; and there is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother.

PRAYER:— O Thou friend of sinners, befriend me and I will try and be a friend to others.

WHEN SUCCESS IS POOR

John Lunsman, St. Louis junkyard keeper, died the other day at the age of 86, leaving a fortune of slightly more than $250,000.

For long years he had lived a life of privation, engaged in mean tasks, depriving himself of pleasure, comfort, decent surroundings, friendships, devoting himself solely to the task of saving money. He had succeeded; his quarter of a million dollars attests it.

Yet even in America, where money is placed on the highest of pinnacles, it would be hard to find many people to agree that the old chap hed led an enviable or admirable life.

You can get just about what you want out of life if you care to pay the price. You can use life as the means to an end, subordinating everything in it to the one thing you are seeking, making, making every act have reference to your goal; and, like the old St. Louis junk dealer, you will be successful.

Or you can look on life as something of an end in itself. You can view it as an experience; something that can be made to yield richness and fragrance from the first to last. If you do that you will have time for little diversions along the way—time for the experience of love, friendship, devotion, self-sacrifice, fidelity and courage. Those are the things that often have to be thrown overboard if one has too much singleness of purpose. But they are, in the main, the things that make life worth living.

Old John Lunsman had 86 years and $250,000 when he died; yet for all that, he can hardly be said really to have lived at all. He had his goal and he gained it, but you could not find anyone to say that it was worth the price he paid. And while few people sacrifice as much to get as little as he did, his case is nevertheless a valuable object lesson.

There is too much of a tendency to regard material success as the sole criterion by which life can be judged. It would be fine to be Henry Ford, no doubt; yet beyond question, there are mechanics in Henry Ford's factories, salesmen in his own salesrooms, who have had more honest enjoyment out of life than Ford has had.

We need to be a little bit less in earnest about life. To much looking to the future is apt to lead to an ignoring of the present. There is something to be said for the wisdom of the grasshopper as opposed to the wisdom of the ant.

FAMILIARITY

Dr. John R. Mott, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. national council, told a meeting of New York business men the other day that as nations are being brought closer together by improved transportation and communication they are reacting on each other "with increasing virulence" and are thereby drifting gradually closer toward war.

That is rather surprising. We used to assume that bringing the nations closer together would make them more neighborly. Every advance in transportation and communication, such as the airplane and the radio, has been hailed as a force that would make for world peace. But Dr. Mott doesn't see it that way.

Maybe it's only natural that it should work out that way, at that. Individuals often remain more friendly if they don't see each other too often; it's usually easier to be friends with a man living a block away than with the next-door neighbor. Perhaps it's the same with nations.

THE THIRD TERM PRECEDENT

The most magnificant thing about the final retirement of President Coolidge, is that the third term precedent is not to be broken though whether this had any part in Mr. Coolidge's decision is not at all clear.

Opinions differ greatly as to whether a third presidential term would be any menace. But the fact that many people feel it would be, acts as a barrier tending to prevent any president from obtaining it. The burden of the office is so heavy that most presidents who have had a second term have been glad enough to quit their heavy job. And the burden grows worse and worse every year.

The American people seem to squeeze the life out a president in a double term, and few men would have the vitality or energy with which to pick up the load for four years more.

Glad to be skippin'
Your school
Just for a half-day
Of joy;
King of a king with
Crown
Of leaves on your
Head, and for hours
You would sit
Stern with a frown
Building your
Fairyland bowers—
Kind of a ruler,
You were
Dreaming out there
On the bank,
Dreamin' sometimes
Just of Her,
Unwilling to step
From your rank;
Plannin' for days
When you'd
Grow
Into the manhood of Life—
Ah, millions the
Seeds you would
Sow,
There far removed
From the strife—
Who wouldn't
Give half his years,
Just to be back
There again,
Hard to keep back
All these tears,
Old age came in
With the
Rain—

And what we mean to say
Is,
Heroes have sat by
These pools,
Planning their dreams
When mere boys,
Older folks oft called
Them fools,
Trying to break up
Their joys,
But Life, 'though it
Sometimes seems stern
Lets the dreamer dream
On with his pet
And those who may

"TENDERLOIN," starring Dolores Costello, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

A satchel containing $200,000 has been stolen from the Mercer National Bank. The police suspect the Professor, leader of a gang of crooks, of being involved. The Professor, however, believes that lovely Rose Shannon, a cabaret dancer, knows where the money is hidden. He assigns Chuck White, one of his country to visit Chuck's supposed gangsters, to invite her to the country to visit Chuck's supposed "aunt," hoping that she may give herself away during her stay. Chuck falls in love with Rose, and when she tearfully denies all knowledge of the robbery, he decides to protect her. Angered by Chuck's failure, the Professor arrives on the scene himself.

"I'm so glad to meet you, Miss Shannon," Dapper held out his hand, bowing low, assuming his most impressive smile.

"Oh, I'm just so glad you all came." Rose looked about the room, smiling at Mug and Sparrow, "Aren't you, Aunt Molly?"

"I sure am," Molly agreed, giving the Mug a knowing wink.

"Tell me, have you two been having a good time?" the Professor questioned, looking at Rose and Chuck.

"Oh, we been having a grand time," Rose laughed. "We been walking and canoeing, and the flowers are lovely, and I feed the chickens—I just love it, and I can't thank you—"

"Now, now—no thanks at all, young lady. I'm only too glad to see the roses back in your cheeks again." Heminway pinched the girl's glowing face teasingly.

"I'll do th' talking from now on."

Chuck bit his lip to keep back the angry torrent of words that flooded his mouth. He hated seeing this old charlatan assuming such proprietory interest in the girl—hated seeing Rose duped by such an unscrupulous fakir. He'd have it all out with him later and put an end to everything this very evening.

They were seating themselves about the fire, now a rather silent group, somewhat ill at ease—all that is, save the Professor and Rose, who chatted gaily away about the country and New York and all the little trivialities of the day. The others were quiet, fearing to speak too much lest they should give themselves away.

The entire atmosphere, as seen by a casual observer, suggested peaceful domesticity. But behind it all there were quick, suspicious glances, strained attention, furtive looks. Molly, leaning back in her armchair, stroking the cat, was watching the Professor and smiling cynically at Mug as the man played his game with the girl. Lefty was lolling back comfortably, but his right foot beat a nervous tatoo as he waited eagerly for the real "fun" to start. And Sparrow gazed helplessly at Chuck, half scenting that things had not turned out as they had all hoped.

Finally, Chuck, anxious to hear something, whether good or bad, moved towards the corner where Sparrow was sitting and leaned over his chair.

"What's it all about?" he questioned, his voice so low that it sounded only like a mumble to the others in the room.

"Hell's poppin'," Sparrow returned out of the side of his mouth.

"Anything new on the stick-up?" Chuck asked.

"Nope, not'in'. Th' dicks is tailin' th' bank people. An' they ain't gotta t'ing. 'Ey was out all day roundin' up th' teller. 'Ey been houndin' us, but—"

"They don't know nothing about this ranch, do they?"

"Naw, 'ey come aroun' lookin' fer youse, but th' Prof tells 'em we ain't got no idea where ya gone. He tells 'em he guesses maybe youse eloped with th' goil, but we ain't seen youse. Ya got th' yella ticket?"

"Yep, this afternoon," Chuck nodded. "Jeez, Sparrow, this is a hell of a mess. Rose didn't have nothing to do with this here racket."

"Try an' tell 'at to th' ole man. He's hell bent fer heaven on 'is here. Somebuddy's gonna git it in th' neck. Cripes, I hope it tain't gonna be youse, big fella." He looked up at Chuck admiringly. "Say, lissen, ya remember 'at yella-haired dame up to Fazenda's? Well, she's took up wit 'Red' Moran now."

"Yeah?" Chuck's lack of interest was so evident that Sparrow looked at him curiously.

"Well, you was kinda playin' aroun' wit her, wasn't youse?"

"Maybe—but that ain't now," Chuck retorted quickly. "Say, lissen, Sparrow. I'm through with all that, see? I gotta crush on this dame that's nobody's business. And you ain't heard me say nothing like that before, have you?"

"My Gawd!" Sparrow looked up at Chuck, his eyes widening with interest. It seemed impossible to believe—that Chuck White had actually admitted that he had fallen for a jane.

"I tell you, Sparrow, Rose's as straight as a die. There ain't a crooked thing about her. An', Sparrow, I got a hunch there's gonna be trouble tonight. An' if there is, where're you gonna be?"

"Say, whatcha astin' foolish questions fer? Ya know where I'm gonna be. You an' me, we allius sticks toget'er, don't we? I ain't no heel."

"Atta boy, Sparrow. Say, it'll sure be great to see li'l old New York again." He raised his voice, smiling at the same time, for he could see that Molly was straining to catch the trend of his conversation. He felt a little more relieved, for he knew that he could trust Sparrow.

For a while there was silence. Mug and Lefty squirmed uneasily in their chairs, anxious to be left with their crew, so that they might talk freely once more. The Professor drummed his fingers nervously on the arm of his chair, eager to have Chuck and Molly to himself and find out what had happened. The clock sounded ten warning strokes. Molly yawned openly.

"Well, I guess I ought to go to bed," Rose, feeling that the others might have matters to go over which were none of her concern, got up and prepared to say goodnight. "I know you got lots of things to talk about."

"No, no, not at all, my dear." The Professor got to his feet, taking the girl's hand in his. "We shall only be sorry to be deprived of your company. But we shall see you in the morning."

"Good night, Mr. Sparrow—good night, everybody," she nodded.

Chuck followed Rose to the stairway. "Don't forget what I told you, sweetheart," he whispered, squeezing her hand.

"I won't, dear." She disappeared up the steps, the glow of the lamp in her hand fading slowly away.

CHAPTER XV

As the last vestige of Rose disappeared up the stairs, Mug heaved a sigh of relief and took out his hip flask. Silently he drank and passed the container on to Lefty, who followed suit, and then turned it over to Molly. The woman gulped, swallowed, and then passed the flask on to Chuck, lighting a cigarette. The boy shook his head and handed it on to the Professor, who waved it away and rose, facing his new opponent belligerently.

"Well, what have you got to say for yourself?" he demanded.

"Nothing." Chuck thrust his hands deep into his pockets and returned the Professor's stare coolly.

"Nothing? What the hell do you think you've been doing down here, anyhow?"

"Doin'? I'll tell ya what he's been doin,'" Molly interrupted, planting herself squarely between the two, her flabby, dissipated face leering triumphantly. "He ain't been doin' nut'in', but mushin' up wit' th' moll—that dirty, little—"

"You shut your trap, will ya!" Chuck turned suddenly, raising his fist menacingly. "I'll do th' talking from now on. An' if you open your face to say one word about that girl, I'll—"

"Ah, since when has Mr. Charles White become a Squire of Dames?" Heminway snorted.

"I ain't got nothing to do with dames," Chuck exploded, his face flushing angrily. "There's only one dame I'm interested in, and that's this Rose Shannon. Now get this!" He pounded his fist on the table to emphasize his statements. "This dame don't know a damn thing about that jack. We was dead wrong. She's straight through and through."

"Say, how ja git dat way!" The Mug took a step forward, his lower jaw thrust out in scorn and disbelief.

"Be quiet, all of you!" Heminway held up a warning hand. "Now, Mr. Chuck White, will you explain yourself?"

ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS MADE SMITH PLANK

Farm Aid Also Promised In Platform Written by Democratic Convention.

BY PAUL R. MALLON
(United Press Staff Correspondent

HOUSTON, June 29.—Gov. Alfred E. Smith will run on a platform pledging honest law enforcement and substantial farm relief, written around the slogan of Andrews Jackson: "Turn the rascals out."

The platform was adopted by the Democratic party as represented in its national convention here with scarcely a dissenting voice just before the roll call upon which Smith was nominated.

The unanimity of opinion among the wets anad drys, McNary-Haugenites and farm conservatives, antis and pros of all principles was demonstrated when Gov. Dan Moody of Texas ,who undertook the role of Boy Bryan dry leader here and Governor Ritchie of Maryland, a spokesman of the wets and declined to submit a minority reports although both spoke from the platform of their views. No other minority reports were offered.

Rewrite Dry Plank.

The prohibition plank was rewritten by Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, the most ardent of enthusiastic drys, it said:

"The Republican party, for eight years in complete control of the government at Washington, presents the spectacle of feeling compelled in its national platform to promise obedience to a provision of the federal constitution which it has flagrantly disregarded and to apologize to the country for its failure to enforce laws enacted by the congress of the United States.

"Speaking for the national democracy, this convention pledges the party and its nominee to an honest effort to enforce the eighteenth amendment and all other provisions of the federal constitution and all laws enacted pursuant thereto."

Eliminate Statement

Glass succeeded in eliminating from the report as presented by the committee, a statement as to how the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act could be repealed. He accepted the plank as it stood although he is an earnest opponent of Smith. Moody explained he had fought for the bone-dry plank adopted by the Texas state convention and Ritchie said he adhered to the plank without sacrificing his argument that prohibition usurped the rights of states.

In the final analysis, however, everyone seemed to agree about everything and Smith appeared to have obtained as near an acquiescent endorsement from the bone-dry south as he could possibly receive.

The farm relief plank spoke in no specific terms about the McNary-Haugen equalization fee system but it promised agriculture about everything a democratic convention could offer without endorsing a Republican bill. It offered a federal farm board system to handle the surplus, development of cooperative marketing facilities and every possible effort to diminish the spread between the producers' sale price and the consumers' buying price.

Cite G. O. P. Corruption

But the convention chose "Republican corruption" as the big issue upon which the party will set Smith to battle in November against Herbert Hoover, the Republican nominee. This plank was second among the 30 planks running about 6,000 words.

"Shocking thieveries," "sordid corruption and unabashed rascality," "compounded frauds," and "startling depravities" were the terms used by the platform to describe what the Democrats considered Republican iniquities, such as charged in the oil scandals, and campaign expenditures investigations.

"The watchword of the day should be: 'Turn the rascals out'," the plank concluded.

The remedy for agricultural ills must be found in one of the four following things, the platform committee told the convention:

1—Credit loans by the government to co-operatives on a basis similar to government aid for the merchant marine.

2—Creation of a federal farm board to assist the farmer in marketing as the federal reserve board has done for the banker and business man.

3—Reduction of the spread between the price the farmer sells for and the price the consumer pays, aimed apparently to reduce the profits of the middleman and the cost of transportation.

4—Consideration of agricultural conditions in formulation of government financial and tax measures.

Foreign Plank

The foreign relations plank included: Outlawry of war; "freedom from entangling political alliance with foreign nations"; protection of American lives and rights; non-interference in the Democratic affairs of foreign countries, including particularly Mexico, Nicaragua and all other Latin-American nations; promotion of international arbitration, conciliation and limitation of armaments by agreement; full and free co-operation with other nations for promotion of peace aand justice; abolition of the practice of permitting the president to enter de facto or de jure agreements with foreign countries; recognition of the Monroe doctrine.

Fred Humes in "Hands Off" at the Grand is a good picture tonight. They warned him, "hands off," but he did not take the hint and finds himself in a whirlwind of adventures thru his timely meddling.

COMEDY AND ROMANCE

All the world loves a comedy—and all the world loves a love story. Wherefore in "Circus Rookies," the new co-starring effort of Karl Dane and George K. Arthur, those redoubtable heroes of "Rookies," has been achieved a picture that everyone certainly should like. It has all the hilarious comedy in the world, plus a very pretty love story, all woven together into a liting cocktail of mirth and entertainment.

The new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, now playing at the Metropolital theatre, plunges the heroes into a series of circus adventures. Dane, a roustabout, gets a job as animal trainer and Arthur gets the post of press agent, and then the fun begins. There is a huge gorilla in the picture, too—he chases the heroes over a careening circus train, and Arthur gets tangled up with a trapeze, and thrills and laughs mix in profusion.

ANSWERS JUSTIN

Circleville, O., June 28, 1928.
To The Editor Circleville Herald:

In reply to Justin's letter to the editor, relative to he being held up at South Court crossing last Sunday morning, account a southbound freight train passing over crossing.

He asks why the crossing gates were not raised immediately after the southbound train had passed. Why ask that question when he admits a northbound was on the same crossing in just one minute or two, after the southbound had passed.

I am working under the authority of the Norfolk and Western Railway Co., and not under the authority of a citizen of Circleville.

Our instruction from the company is "Safety First." Do not take any chances."

It would have been fool hardy in me to have raised the gates and permit "Justin" try to beat the rapidly approaching train to the crossing, not only placing his life in jeopardy but a score of others who were waiting.

Had I taken a chance, raised the gates and "Justin" had been badly injured possibly killed with a number of others then what?

I would have disobeyed the rules of the company, also be censured by the public, and arrested for manslaughter.

We are only trying to protect life at the crossing, not trying to hold people up.

I am sorry "Justin" was late for church and can only suggest he start to church a little earlier, for he may meet with the same existing circumstances next Sunday and many Sundays to come.

LAST TWO ROUNDS GIVE TOMMY LOUGHRAN VICTORY

MEETS MATCH IN EMANUEL; REAL BATTLE

NEW YORK, June 29 — The first decision ever rendered against Armand Emanuel, California lawyer-fighter, was given last night when Tommy Loughran, light heavyweight champion, was declared the winner in ten rounds at the garden.

The champion's title was not at stake, Emanuel weighing a quarter of a pound above the weight. The Californian weighed 175 1-4 and Loughran 174 3-4.

Loughran met his equal as a boxer and covered himself up by finishing the last two rounds in whirlwind fashion. It was this last attack, coupled with points gained earlier in the fight, which earned the decision for him.

The champion started off as if determined to knock out the Californian in an early round, but the attack was unsuccessful and Loughran had to resort to boxing.

Loughran's footwork and ring generalship forced Emanuel into several awkward positions. Emanuel was strong in the clinches.

Baseball

YESTERDAY'S HERO: Babe Ruth, who knocked out his 29th and 30th home runs of the season, aiding the Yankees to smother the Philadelphia Athletics 10 to 4.

The New York Giants won their fifth straight from the Phillies 2 to 1. Genewich and Benge allowed only four hits apiece.

The St. Louis Cardinals started their home series by defeating the Pittsburgh Pirates 4 to 3.

A close game went to the Chicago White Sox when they scored a run in their half of the ninth inning, winning 2 to 1.

A twin bill was divided between the Boston Red Sox and the Washington Senators. Washington won the first game 4 to 3 and the Sox the second 8 to 7.

St. Louis strengthened its grip on third place in the American League by a 5 to 2 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

WHAT BIG STARS DID YESTERDAY

Babe Ruth; Hit two more runs, his 29th and 30th of season.

Lou Gehrig: Two out of five trips.

Ty Cobb: One out of five.

Paul Waner: A double in two trips.

Frankie Frisch: A home run and two doubles in four trips.

Harry Heilmann: None out of four trips.

Tris Speaker and Rogers Hornsby were idle.

CHICAGO, June 29 — The Women's Medal Play Golf title rested with a former winner today, Mrs. Lee W. Mida, Chicago, who completed a total of 54 holes for an aggregate of 261 to win from Mrs. Austin Pardue, Hibbing, Minn., who scored 262. Mrs. Melvin Jones, Chicago, was third with 269.

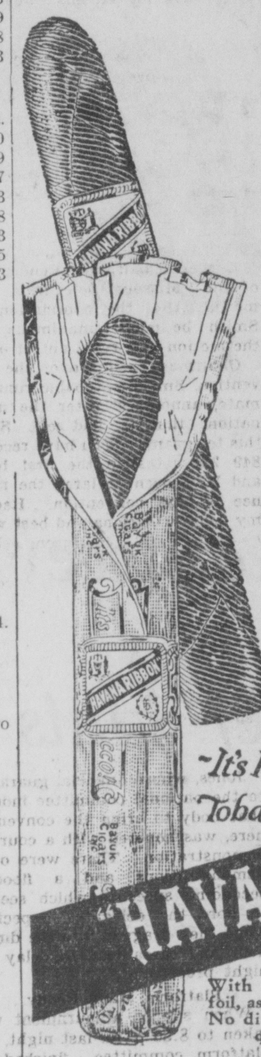
A FIVE-CENT CIGAR you can really enjoy



IF YOU smoke for pastime, most any cigar may often do. But if you want a cigar that really puts taste enjoyment into your smoking — and saves you money besides!—here's one that will do it: Havana Ribbon. And this is why:

Havana Ribbon contains no bitter under-ripe top leaves of the tobacco plant. No flat-tasting over-ripe bottom leaves. No "clippings" or short ends to crumble and come out in your mouth. . . . But only long, true-tasting, flavor-laden, fully-ripe middle leaves of choice tobacco plants.

You naturally expect such tobacco in a higher-priced cigar. But have you ever heard of such a thing in a five-cent cigar? Isn't it just about the biggest piece of smoke news that has ever come before you? No wonder today's Havana Ribbon is riding the biggest wave of popularity in all the thirty years it has been on the market! At cigar counters everywhere.

"It's Ripe Tobacco!"

"HAVANA RIBBON" MADE BY BAYUK 5¢

With or without foil, as you prefer. No difference in quality. (Londres)

SPORTSMATTER

BY FRANK GETTY

United News Sports Editor

The struggle for places on the sprint squad of the United States Olympic team promises to bring out the best efforts of perhaps the fastest field ever gathered for one meet in this country.

A glimpse of Charley Paddock and Jackson V. Scholz, veterans of two Olympic teams, and Aubrey Bracey and Frank Wykoff, the two young sprint sensations, flying down the cinder path at one and the same time may hold thrills no other races have ever furnished.

Not as fast as he once was, Paddock is still good enough to hold his own with the fastest men in the world and he is quite likely to place on his third Olympic team. Scholz, who beat Paddock in the 200-meter race at the 1924 games when Paddock, leading the field, turned his head to the side for a fleeting glance at his rivals, has gone back a little, but he, too, should gain his third berth on the Olympic squad.

Hussey Due to Place

Frank Hussey, the chubby-faced New York boy, who made the 1924 Olympic team at 18 while a student at Stuyvesant high school, New York, is another sprinter who is due to place on the Olympic team again. Hussey has been showing great form in recent workouts, winning the 100 meters in the eastern Olympic tryouts in 11 seconds and the 100 yards in the metropolitan championships in 9 4-5 seconds.

The only other member of the 1924 sprint squad who has a chance to make the team again is Chet Bowman, national champion and co-holder with Paddock of the world's record of 9 3-5 seconds for the 100-yard dash. Bowman pulled a tendon in the eastern Olympic trpouts, but may be allowed to compete by special permission in the final tryouts. In shape, Bowman is fast enough to make the team again.

Competing for the ten places on the United States sprint squad will be nearly fifty of the fastest men in the country selected by competition in the sectional tryouts.

Of this number, two of outstanding prospects are Bracey of Rice Institute, Houston, Texas, and Wykoff, the Glendale, Calif., high school boy. On the basis of form, Bracey and Wykoff are the two fastest sprinters in the United States and, barrying accidents, will land on the Olympic team.

Wykoff Beat Paddock

Wykoff beat Paddock in both the 100 and 200 meters at the southwest Olypmic trials in Los Angles running the former event in 10-3-5 seconds and the latter in 20-4-5 seconds, tying Paddock's world's record in that event. Wykoff, for the past two years, has consistently run the 100 yard dash in 9 4-5 seconds, and on one occasion was caught by three watches in 9 3-5 seconds, equalling the world's record.

Bracey's record is just as brilliant, and one has the feeling that when Bracey and Wykoff get together at Boston, all records will be in danger. A long, tall lad, Bracey first flashed into prominence when he ran the 100 yard dash in 9 5-10 seconds, one-tenth of a second faster than the world's record in the Texas Relays. He then ran the century in 9 6-10 in the Rice relays after being left at the post because of a poor start.

But Bracey did not really convince the north and east he was a great sprinter until he won the 100 yard dash in 9 6-10 seconds and the 220 yard dash in 20 9-10 seconds at the N. C. A. A. meet at Chicago.

Mere ten second men in the 100 yard dash will not have a ghost of a chance against these flying humans.

TWO WOMEN MEET IN SEMI-FINALS

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., June 29 — Mrs. Miriam Burns Horn, Kansas City, defending champion, and Miss Marion Turple, New Orleans, met on the Minikahada course here today in the first of the two semi-final round matches of the Trans-Mississippi Women's Golf championship.

Miss Patricia Stephenson, 17-year-old "Baby" of the tournament, was matched against Mrs. O. S. Hill, Kansas City, in the other semi-final match today.

Mrs. Horn won her way to the semi-finals by defeating Mrs. D. S. Veitch, Kansas City, 6 and 5. Miss Turpie eliminated Mrs. Dow George, Minneapolis, one up. Mrs. Hill played her best golf of the tournament in defeating Mrs. R. E. Brennan, Tulsa, Okla., 5 and 4, while Miss Stephenson defeated Mrs. F. B. Jaffray, Minneapolis, 6 and 4.

Twin Ignition HIGH COMPRESSION MOTOR

12 Spark Plugs [Airplane Type] instead of 6

The new "Twin Ignition" motor, in the new Advanced and Special Nash "400" models, is a truly amazing development in power.

It is a high-compression motor, with two ignition coils, instead of one, two spark plugs per cylinder, instead of one, 360 sparks per second at top speed, instead of 180, to thoroughly and economically burn the highly-compressed gases.

It sets a precedent in motor-performance among all motor cars.

Nash "400" Advanced Six models are now capable of 75 to 80 miles per hour with no effort at all.

Nash "400" Special Six models do 70 to 75 with consummate ease.

Another major advantage of the "Twin Ignition" motor is economy —more power, more speed, less gasoline.

Drive a new Nash "400" and you'll see what Twin-Ignition and high compression have done to give the world a new and finer motor car.

DEM. CONVENTION

elm features, Reed stood before the convention, a beaten man but with the sportsmanship to extend a hand to the man who had defeated him in a long battle.

It was a tragic hour for the veteran Missourian. He is growing old, and going out of the senate. He has had his chance. Yet when he strode on the platform where another defeated Democrat sat — John W. Davis, 1924 candidate— Reed smiled. He turned to several on the speaker's platform, among them former Secretary of the Navy Daniels and shook hands. A smile passed across his stern countenance. A badly beaten candidate with only 52 votes to his credit, Reed did not show by his manner the bitter disappointment that his friends know was his.

Reed Is Confident

"If the Democratic party is as lively in November as it is here tonight, we will have no trouble in outrunning the Republican party," he said after he had congratulated the "Great Governor of New York" and had asked the country to support him to save the United States "from the menace of corruption" He thanked his friends for their support.

Earlier Chairman Pendergrast of the Missouri delegation had moved that the nomination of Smith be made unanimous, but the motion was ruled out of order.

Chairman Robinson of the convention, Smith's probable runningmate, announced after the nomination, that he had sent Smith this telegram: "You have received 849 2-3 votes on the first ballot and have been declared the nominee of this convention. Receive my congratulations and best wishes—Joseph T. Robinson, chairman."

The nomination of the governor climaxed a hectic day in Sam Houston coliseum. Other candidates were nominated and seconded— Jesse Jones, Houston millionaire, Huston Thompson, Colorado; Senator Reed; former Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, Representative Cordell Hull of Tennessee; Atlee Pomerene of Ohio.

Jones, whose financial guarantee to the national committee induced that body to bring the convention here, was honored with a courtesy demonstration. There were other demonstrations and a flood of seconding speeches which seemed to bore the delegates, especially when they dragged into the dinner hour, and threatened to delay the night proceedings.

Platform Made Ready

When supper adjournment was taken to 8:30 p m last night, the platform committee finished its labors, and upon reopening for the night meeting offered the platform It contained a dry plank which endorsed the 18th amendment law enforcement, condemned alleged failure of Republicans to enforce laws, attacked alleged Republican corruption, and advocated a Democratic program of farm relief tantamount to the McNary-Haugen equalization scheme but without naming equalization.

Gov. Moody, who had threatened to carry his objections to the dry plank into a fight on the floor, made a speech stating he had stood for the bone-dry recommendations of the Texas state delegation but stood alone in the platform committee and hence was willing to acquiesce in the majority report. Senator Carter Glass also made a statement of his position but no minority report against the dry plank was presented. Gov. Ritchie of Maryland argued against the majority plank and pleaded for a "more liberal attitude" toward interpretation of the 18th amendment and for "state rights" and "personal liberty."

Adopts Platform

The convention adopted the platform without a record vote. A few scattered and weak noes marked the collapse of what had been trumpted earlier in the week as a battle royal which might cause a new split in the Democratic party. The battle had faded as time went on, though Moody and some other southern followers had accomplished their aim of developing material to take back home to their dry constituents

After the prohibition subject and the platform had been disposed of, balloting started. Smith rolled up imposing totals as his followers shouted approval of every state that swung to him When the full roster has been called, Smith had 724 2-3 votes. Switching then began amid a tumult as several delegation speakers tried to get recognition Finally when three groups—the Tennessee, Mississippi and Oklohoma delegations— had been polled because their announcements were questioned the official total showed:

Smith' Way Ahead

Smith 849 2-3, Reed 52; George 52 1-2; Woollen 7; Ayers 3; Hitchcock 2; Hull 50 5-6; Pomerene 3; Jones 43. Thompson 2; Chief Justice Watts, South Carolina, 18 Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi had 20 complimentary votes on the original call. Ohio's switch before announcement of the vote put Smith "over the top."

Smith's strength had been surpassed in recent years only in 1916 when Woodrow Wilson was nominated by acclamation. Four years ago in Madison Square Garden, New York, it took 103 ballots before the candidate, John W Davis, was named

Announcement of the Smith total touched off a wild demonstration The ubiquitous "Old Grey Mare" band, led by the Grey Mare and her pretty blonde girl rider, paraded through the hall to the accompaniment of three other bands, sirens, screeches, whistles and applause while delegations trailed into the parade Earlier in the day, Chairman Robinson had asked the pretty girl rider to "remove the cavalry" so the convention could proceed. Last night he let the demonstration run its course, and the the Old Grey Mare and her innings as leader of the "bandwagon procession"

Davis and Reed Speak

Then came the speeches of Davis and Reed. Davis, like Reed urged the party to unite behind Smith and sounded the keynote of "on to victory."

"Four years ago with due deliberation—somewhat prolonged deliberation I may say — you entrusted me with banner of your party," Davis said, "I thank you for honor and congratulate you for the man you've named. No great principle of the party was abandoned in 1924 campaign. In character, ability and in point of public service the nominee deserves and will receive not only the support of the Democratic party but of a majority of his fellow countrymen. We have a platform and candidate behind whom all Democrats should rally."

It was about 1 o'clock when the show finally ended Many had quit the hall before the close, so as to be ready for the 10 o'clock start today.

The hall today showed gaps for many guests were on their way home after watching the culmination of the presidential and prohibition battles

There is a possibility that nominating speeches for vice president may drag out today's proceedings

But by nightfall many specials will be speeding to the north, east and west bearing delegates to their homes after a week filled with color, heat, high prices poor elevator service and merry making There has been much grousing about conditions here but the delegates agree that Houstonians themselves have sought to show the strangers within their gates a spirit of true southern hospitality and welcome

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

BY
EDSON R. WAITE
Shawnee, Oklahoma

HAROLD D. VALPEY, MANAGING EDITOR OF THE LYNN (MASS.) EVENING ITEM, SAYS:

"DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK HOW SELF CENTERED THE AVERAGE AMERICAN CITY AND TOWN ARE?

"One may pass through hundreds of them without learning their civic identity? That's a serious oversight on the part of the community.

"The largest metropolis in the country is a mere speck in comparison with the inhabited settlements of the world. And yet how very few of them devote either thought or effort to making their corporate names known outside their own environs or even to visitors?

"Miami, Fla., is a notable exception to this fact. That wideawake city sets a profitable example in this respect. Down there every resident contributes a two per cent tax for publicity purposes to bring their city and its accomplishments to the favorable attention of the civilized world—and successfully too.

"Home town knowledge alone is not sufficient. Make it nation wide at least.

"Touring motorists are the most prolific and inexpensive method of accomplishing this purpose. And yet there are hundreds of cities and towns in the United States so completely undesignated on streets and buildings that the average motorist passes through them without knowing what place he is in

"Keep your city's name before the world!

"Carve it into the facade of every public building.

"Print it, as does Publisher Charles H. Hastings of the Lynn Item, on the back of every envelope you send out.

"Create some outstanding feature that will indelibly impress your city's name on the minds of every actual or prospective visitor.

"I shall always distinctly remember the otherwise unimpressive city of Blois in the chateau country of southern France because its stone public building is entirely outlined at night by thousands of jets of illuminated gas. It's novelties like this that a visitor never forgets.

"KEEP YOUR CITY'S NAME IN THE PUBLIC EYE AND MIND OF THE WORLD. IT WILL PAY PROFITABLE RETURNS."

elm features, Reed stood before the convention, a beaten man but with the sportsmanship to extend a hand to the man who had defeated him in a long battle.

It was a tragic hour for the veteran Missourian. He is growing old, and going out of the senate. He has had his chance. Yet when he strode on the platform where another defeated Democrat sat — John W. Davis, 1924 candidate— Reed smiled. He turned to several on the speaker's platform, among them former Secretary of the Navy Daniels and shook hands. A smile passed across his stern countenance. A badly beaten candidate with only 52 votes to his credit, Reed did not show by his manner the bitter disappointment that his friends know was his.

Reed Is Confident

"If the Democratic party is as lively in November as it is here tonight, we will have no trouble in outrunning the Republican party," he said after he had congratulated the "Great Governor of New York" and had asked the country to support him to save the United States "from the menace of corruption." He thanked his friends for their support.

Earlier Chairman Pendergrast of the Missouri delegation had moved that the nomination of Smith be made unanimous, but the motion was ruled out of order.

Chairman Robinson of the convention, Smith's probable running-mate, announced after the nomination, that he had sent Smith this telegram: "You have received 849 2-3 votes on the first ballot and have been declared the nominee of this convention. Receive my congratulations and best wishes—Joseph T. Robinson, chairman."

The nomination of the governor climaxed a hectic day in Sam Houston coliseum. Other candidates were nominated and seconded— Jesse Jones, Houston millionaire; Huston Thompson, Colorado; Senator Reed; former Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska; Representative Cordell Hull of Tennessee; Atlee Pomerene of Ohio.

Jones, whose financial guarantee to the national committee induced that body to bring the convention here, was honored with a courtesy demonstration. There were other demonstrations and a flood of seconding speeches which seemed to bore the delegates, especially when they dragged into the dinner hour and threatened to delay the night proceedings.

Platform Made Ready

When supper adjournment was taken to 8:30 p. m. last night, the platform committee finished its labors, and upon reopening for the night meeting offered the platform. It contained a dry plank which endorsed the 18th amendment law enforcement; condemned alleged failure of Republicans to enforce laws; attacked alleged Republican corruption, and advocated a Democratic program of farm relief tantamount to the McNary-Haugen equalization scheme but without naming equalization.

Gov. Moody, who had threatened to carry his objections to the dry plank into a fight on the floor, made a speech stating he had stood for the bone-dry recommendations of the Texas state delegation but stood alone in the platform committee and hence was willing to acquiesce in the majority report. Senator Carter Glass also made a statement of his position but no minority report against the dry plank was presented. Gov. Ritchie of Maryland argued against the majority plank and pleaded for a "more liberal attitude" toward interpretation of the 18th amendment and for "state rights" and "personal liberty."

Adopts Platform

The convention adopted the platform without a record vote. A few scattered and weak noes marked the collapse of what had been trumpted earlier in the week as a battle royal which might cause a new split in the Democratic party. The battle had faded as time went on, though Moody and some other southern followers had accomplished their aim of developing material to take back home to their dry constituents.

After the prohibition subject and the platform had been disposed of, balloting started. Smith rolled up imposing totals as his followers shouted approval of every state that swung to him. When the full roster has been called, Smith had 724 2-3 votes. Switching then began amid a tumult as several delegation speakers tried to get recognition. Finally when three groups—the Tennessee, Mississippi and Oklohoma delegations— had been polled because their announcements were questioned, the official total showed:

Smith' Way Ahead

Smith 849 2-3; Reed 52; George 52 1-2; Woollen 7; Ayers 3; Hitchcock 2; Hull 50 5-6; Pomerene 3; Jones 43; Thompson 2; Chief Justice Watts, South Carolina, 18. Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi had 20 complimentary votes on the original call. Ohio's switch before announcement of the vote put Smith "over the top."

Smith's strength had been surpassed in recent years only in 1916 when Woodrow Wilson was nominated by acclamation. Four years ago in Madison Square Garden, New York, it took 103 ballots before the candidate, John W. Davis, was named.

Announcement of the Smith total touched off a wild demonstration. The ubiquitous "Old Grey Mare" band, led by the Grey Mare and her pretty blonde girl rider, paraded through the hall to the accompaniment of three other bands, sirens, screeches, whistles and applause while delegations trailed into the parade. Earlier in the day, Chairman Robinson had asked the pretty girl rider to "remove the cavalry" so the convention could proceed. Last night he let the demonstration run its course, and the the Old Grey Mare and her innings as leader of the "bandwagon procession."

Davis and Reed Speak

Then came the speeches of Davis and Reed. Davis, like Reed, urged the party to unite behind Smith and sounded the keynote of "on to victory."

"Four years ago with due deliberation—somewhat prolonged deliberation I may say — you entrusted me with banner of your party," Davis said, "I thank you for honor and congratulate you for the man you've named. No great principle of the party was abandoned in 1924 campaign. In character, ability and in point of public service the nominee deserves and will receive not only the support of the Democratic party but of a majority of his fellow countrymen. We have a platform and candidate behind whom all Democrats should rally."

It was about 1 o'clock when the show finally ended. Many had quit the hall before the close, so as to be ready for the 10 o'clock start today.

The hall today showed gaps, for many guests were on their way home after watching the culmination of the presidential and prohibition battles.

There is a possibility that nominating speeches for vice president may drag out today's procedings.

But by nightfall many specials will be speeding to the north, east and west bearing delegates to their homes after a week filled with color, heat, high prices, poor elevator service and merry making. There has been much "grousing" about conditions here, but the delegates agree that Houstonians themselves have sought to show the strangers within their gates a spirit of true southern hospitality and welcome.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

BY
EDSON R. WAITE
Shawnee, Oklahoma

HAROLD D. VALPEY, MANAGING EDITOR OF THE LYNN (MASS.) EVENING ITEM, SAYS:

"DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK HOW SELF CENTERED THE AVERAGE AMERICAN CITY AND TOWN ARE?

"One may pass through hundreds of them without learning their civic identity! That's a serious oversight on the part of the community.

"The largest metropolis in the country is a mere speck in comparison with the inhabited settlements of the world. And yet how very few of them devote either thought or effort to making their corporate names known outside their own environs or even to visitors?

"Miami, Fla., is a notable exception to this fact. That wideawake city sets a profitable example in this respect. Down there every resident contributes a two per cent tax for publicity purposes to bring their city and its accomplishments to the favorable attention of the civilized world—and successfully too.

"Home town knowledge alone is not sufficient. Make it nation wide at least.

"Touring motorists are the most prolific and inexpensive method of accomplishing this purpose. And yet there are hundreds of cities and towns in the United States so completely undesignated on streets and buildings that the average motorist passes through them without knowing what place he is in.

"Keep your city's name before the world!

"Carve it into the facade of every public building.

"Print it, as does Publisher Charles H. Hastings of the Lynn Item, on the back of every envelope you send out.

"Create some outstanding feature that will indelibly impress your city's name on the minds of every actual or prospective visitor.

"I shall always distinctly remember the otherwise unimpressive city of Blois in the chateau country of southern France because its stone public building is entirely outlined at night by thousands of jets of illuminated gas. It's novelties like this that a visitor never forgets.

"KEEP YOUR CITY'S NAME IN THE PUBLIC EYE AND MIND OF THE WORLD. IT WILL PAY PROFITABLE RETURNS."

LAST TWO ROUNDS GIVE TOMMY LOUGHRAN VICTORY

MEETS MATCH IN EMANUEL; REAL BATTLE

NEW YORK, June 29 — The first decision ever rendered against Armand Emanuel, California lawyer-fighter, was given last night when Tommy Loughran, light heavyweight champion, was declared the winner in ten rounds at the garden.

The champion's title was not at stake, Emanuel weighing a quarter of a pound above the weight. The Californian weighed 175 1-4 and Loughran 174 3-4.

Loughran met his equal as a boxer and covered himself up by finishing the last two rounds in whirlwind fashion. It was this last attack, coupled with points gained earlier in the fight, which earned the decision for him.

The champion started off as if determined to knock out the Californian in an early round, but the attack was unsuccessful and Loughran had to resort to boxing.

Loughran's footwork and ring generalship forced Emanuel into several awkward positions. Emanuel was strong in the clinches.

Baseball

YESTERDAY'S HERO: Babe Ruth, who knocked out his 29th and 30th home runs of the season, aiding the Yankees to smother the Philadelphia Athletics 10 to 4.

The New York Giants won their fifth straight from the Phillies 2 to 1. Genewich and Benge allowed only four hits apiece.

The St. Louis Cardinals started their home series by defeating the Pittsburgh Pirates 4 to 3.

A close game went to the Chicago White Sox when they scored a run in their half of the ninth inning, winning 2 to 1.

A twin bill was divided between the Boston Red Sox and the Washington Senators. Washington won the first game 4 to 3 and the Sox the second 8 to 7.

St. Louis strengthened its grip on third place in the American League by a 5 to 2 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

WHAT BIG STARS DID YESTERDAY

Babe Ruth: Hit two more runs, his 29th and 30th of season.

Lou Gehrig: Two out of five trips.

Ty Cobb: One out of five.

Paul Waner: A double in two trips.

Frankie Frisch: A home run and two doubles in four trips.

Harry Heilmann: None out of four trips.

Tris Speaker and Rogers Hornsby were idle.

CHICAGO, June 29 — The Women's Medal Play Golf title rested with a former winner today, Mrs. Lee W. Mida, Chicago, who completed a total of 54 holes for an aggregate of 261 to win from Mrs. Austin Pardue, Hibbing, Minn., who scored 262. Mrs. Melvin Jones, Chicago, was third with 269.

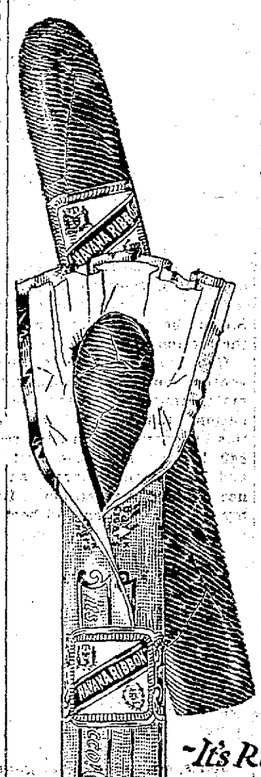
A FIVE-CENT CIGAR you can really enjoy



IF YOU smoke for pastime, most any cigar may often do. But if you want a cigar that really puts taste enjoyment into your smoking — and saves you money besides!—here's one that will do it: Havana Ribbon. And this is why:

Havana Ribbon contains no bitter under-ripe top leaves of the tobacco plant. No flat-tasting over-ripe bottom leaves. No "clippings" or short ends to crumble and come out in your mouth. . . . But only long, true-tasting, flavor-laden, fully-ripe middle leaves of choice tobacco plants.

You naturally expect such tobacco in a higher-priced cigar. But have you ever heard of such a thing in a five-cent cigar? Isn't it just about the biggest piece of smoke news that has ever come before you? No wonder today's Havana Ribbon is riding the biggest wave of popularity in all the thirty years it has been on the market! At cigar counters everywhere.

SPORTSMATTER

BY FRANK GETTY

—The struggle for places on the sprint squad of the United States Olympic team promises to bring out the best efforts or perhaps the fastest field ever gathered for one meet in this country.

A glimpse of Charley Paddock and Jackson v. Scholz, veterans of two Olympic teams, and Aubrey Bracey and Frank Wykoff, the two young sprint sensations, flying down the cinder path at one and the same time may hold thrills no other races have ever furnished.

Not as fast as he once was, Paddock is still good enough to hold his own with the fastest men in the world and he is quite likely to place on his third Olympic team. Scholz, who beat Paddock in the 200-meter race at the 1924 games when Paddock, leading the field, turned his head to the side for a fleeting glance at his rivals, has gone back a little, but he, too, should gain his third berth on the Olympic squad.

Hussey Due to Place

Frank Hussey, the chubby-faced New York boy, who made the 1924 Olympic team at 18 while a student at Stuyvesant high school, New York, is another sprinter who is due to place on the Olympic team again. Hussey has been showing great form in recent workouts, winning the 100 meters in the eastern Olympic tryouts in 11 seconds and the 100 yards in the metropolitan championships in 9 4-5 seconds.

The only other member of the 1924 sprint squad who has a chance to make the team again is Chet Bowman, national champion and co-holder with Paddock of the world's record of 9 3-5 seconds for the 100-yard dash. Bowman pulled a tendon in the eastern Olympic trpouts, but may be allowed to compete by special permission in the final tryouts. In shape, Bowman is fast enough to make the team again.

Competing for the ten places on the United States sprint squad will be nearly fifty of the fastest men in the country selected by competition in the sectional tryouts.

Of this number, two of outstanding prospects are Bracey of Rice Institute, Houston, Texas, and Wykoff, the Glendale, Calif., high school boy. On the basis of form, Bracey and Wykoff are the two fastest sprinters in the United States and, barrying accidents, will land on the Olympic team.

Wykoff Beat Paddock

Wykoff beat Paddock in both the 100 and 200 meters at the southwest Olympic trials in Los Angles running the former event in 10-3-5 seconds and the latter in 20-4-5 seconds, tying Paddock's world's record in that event. Wykoff, for the past two years, has consistently run the 100 yard dash in 9 4-5 seconds, and on one occasion was caught by three watches in 9 3-5 seconds, equalling the world's record.

Bracey's record is just as brilliant, and one has the feeling that when Bracey and Wykoff get together at Boston, all records will be in danger. A long, tall, lad, Bracey first flashed into prominence when he ran the 100 yard dash in 9 5-10 seconds, one-tenth of a second faster than the world's record in the Texas Relays. He then ran the century in 9 6-10 in the Rice relays after being left at the post because of a poor start.

But Bracey did not really convince the north and east he was a great sprinter until he won the 100 yard dash in 9 6-10 seconds and the 220 yard dash in 20 9-10 seconds at the N. C. A. A. meet at Chicago.

Mere ten second men in the 100 yard dash will not have a ghost of a chance against these flying humans.

TWO WOMEN MEET IN SEMI-FINALS

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., June 29—Mrs. Miriam Burns Horn, Kansas City, defending champion, and Miss Marion Turpie, New Orleans, met on the Minikahada course here today in the first of the two semi-final round matches of the Trans-Mississippi Women's Golf championship.

Miss Patricia Stephenson, 17-year-old "baby" of the tournament, was matched against Mrs. D. S. Hill, Kansas City, in the other semi-final match today.

Mrs. Horn won her way to the semi-finals by defeating Mrs. D. S. Veitch, Kansas City, 6 and 5. Miss Turpie eliminated Mrs. Dow George, Minneapolis, one up. Mrs. Hill played her best golf of the tournament in defeating Mrs. R. E. Brennan, Tulsa, Okla., 5 and 4, while Miss Stephenson defeated Mrs. F. B. Jaffray, Minneapolis, 6 and 4.

Twin Ignition HIGH COMPRESSION MOTOR
12 Spark Plugs [Airplane Type] instead of 6

The new "Twin Ignition" motor, in the new Advanced and Special Nash "400" models, is a truly amazing development in power.

It is a high-compression motor, with two ignition coils, instead of one, two spark plugs per cylinder, instead of one, 360 sparks per second at top speed, instead of 180, to thoroughly and economically burn the highly-compressed gases.

It sets a precedent in motor-performance among all motor cars.

Nash "400" Advanced Six models are now capable of 75 to 80 miles per hour with no effort at all.

Nash "400" Special Six models do 70 to 75 with consummate ease.

Another major advantage of the "Twin Ignition" motor is economy —more power, more speed, less gasoline.

Drive a new Nash "400" and you'll see what Twin-Ignition and high compression have done to give the world a new and finer motor car.

REPUBLICANS OF OHIO PUT UP PLATFORM

And More than 2,700 Delegates Start Returning To Their Homes Today.

COLUMBUS, O., June 29 — After adopting a state platform and formally nominating the party's candidates for presidential election at the November election, the Republican state convention adjourned shortly after noon today and the more than 2700 delegates and alternates started for home. The convention opened Thursday afternoon in Memorial hall.

COLUMBUS, O., June 29 — Republican state convention, convening here this morning for its concluding session, had before it for adoption the state platform drafted for its approval by the resolutions committee after nearly an all-night session.

The committee started its work at 8 o'clock last night and adjourned at 3:32 o'clock this morning. It met again at 10 o'clock this morning for final approval of the platform drafted during the more than seven-hour night grind.

Only other business before the convention today is the formal ratification of the list of candidates for presidential electors, completed last night when the state central committee recommended Mrs. Wilma Sinclair Levan, of Steubenville, former national committee woman, and Gen. Edward Orton Jr., of Columbus, for electors-at-large. The 22 district electors were selected Thursday at caucuses of the various district delegations.

The speakers, Congressman Theodore E. Burton, Cleveland, and Chief Justice Carrington T. Marshall, Zanesville, candidates for nomination for short terms as U. S. senator, were on the program for the concluding session. There was a possibility that some of the other candidates for senator would be asked to make short addresses.

HERE'S VOTE OF BIG CONVENTION

HOUSTON, June 29 — The total vote received by the various candidates in the Democratic National convention was recorded on the original roll as follows:

Smith 724 2-3; Hull 71 5-6; George 52 1-2; Reed, 48; Pomerene 47; Jones 43; Woolen 32; Harrison 20; Ayers 20; Watts 18; Hitchcock 16; Donahey 5; Thompson 2.

After several states switched their votes, the final totals stood officially as follows:

Smith 849 2-3; George 52 1-2; Reed 52; Hull 50 5-6; Jones 43; Harrison 8 1-2; Woolen 7; Pomerene 3; Ayres 3.

Hitchcock 2; Thompson 2; Rilbo 1.

Necessary to nominate—733 1-3.

REPUBLICANS OF OHIO PUT UP PLATFORM

And More than 2,700 Delegates Start Returning To Their Homes Today.

COLUMBUS, O., June 29 — After adopting a state platform and formally nominating the party's candidates for presidential election at the November election, the Republican state convention adjourned shortly after noon today and the more than 2700 delegates and alternates started for home. The convention opened Thursday afternoon in Memorial hall.

COLUMBUS, O., June 29 — Republican state convention, convening here this morning for its concluding session, had before it for adoption the state platform drafted for its approval by the resolutions committee after nearly an all-night session.

The committee started its work at 8 o'clock last night and adjourned at 3:32 o'clock this morning. It met again at 10 o'clock this morning for final approval of the platform drafted during the more than seven-hour night grind.
